From Our Own Correspondent.

ASPINWALL, Monday, Jan. 4, 1858.

The most important news I have to communicate by this mail is the capture by Captain SANDS, of the United States steam-frigate Susquehanna, of the balance of the fillibuster force under Colonel ANDERSON, and their arrival on the 30th ult. at this port in the United States war-steamer Fulton, Captain ALMY This was the party which ascended the Colorado into the San Juan River, and took possession of Fort Castillo. Captain SANDS, in the capture of this force, went to a still further extreme than did Commodore PAULDING in landing on Punta Arenas. He ascended the river San Juan into the interior of a foreign nation

I will give you the facts as I have them from a high official source. Nicaragua and Costa Rica, in view of their common danger, it is presumed, came to an understanding on their differences, and sent four hundred men to San Carlos at the entrance to the Lake, and one hundred to Castillo. ANDERSON, finding himself closely pressed and likely to be more so, his stores being short, prepared the steamer Ogden, embarked his men on her, and then wrote to Captain SANDS, asking his views in regard to his surrender. Captain SANDS replied that he was ready to receive him and his men, if they came and delivered up their arms. Subsequently, ANDERSON spiked his cannon, burned all the buildings about Castillo, destroyed the machinery of a steamer at the Rapids, understood to be the Virgin, and having killed all the cattle and plundered all the merchandise within reach, started down the river. Captain SANDS came upon them under these circumstances, nine miles up the river, in the steamer Charles Morgan, full of armed men, and captured them, without any resistance, of course. The Ogden was placed in charge of Mr. COTTRELL, U. S. Consul at Greytown, who has also charge of the Charles Morgan, until the rightful ownership in them is shown.

Capt. SANDS thinks there is a little irregularity in the extreme measures he took, but as he was sent out to break up the fillibusters, he thought this course the shortest, and the one likely to save trouble and suffering on all sides. He, like his Commodore, will doubtless be sustained by the honest public sentiment of the country, and they do not look for nor wish the approval of any other. Besides, it will be sustained by the President, if he is sincere in the very proper language he used in his Message to Congress and we have no right to charge that he is not, after the prompt course he took in the removal of the New-Orleans Judge, and his suspension of Capt. CHATARD from his command.

The fillibusters have been transferred from the Fulton to the Wabash, and the latter vessel sails with them to-day for the United States, calling in at Boca del Toro and Greytown. Some twelve or fourteen of them are sick from fever.

The Fulton will remain in this port for the present. She has twenty-five men on her sick list, principally her working men, whose services she could scarcely do without at sea, and this is the main reason why she, instead of the Wabash, does not take home the fillibusters. During the greater part of the time that the Fulton has been on this coast, the rains have been very heavy and the men much exposed. At one time Captain ALMY laid eight days off the mouth of the Colorado, the rain falling two-thirds of the time in torrents.

Colonel ANDERSON explains the matter of breaking the machinery of a steamer in this way. He says he unscrewed the cylinder head, packed it into a box and took it into the woods and hid it, so that the "enemy" could not use the steamer, as he expected WALKER might be able to return, and would want her himself.

NEW-GRANADA.

The Bogota Press on the Convention with the United States—An Ecclesiastical Imbroglio—Grand Entertainment to Commodore Paulding—Ship News and Miscellaneous.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Monday, Jan. 4, 1858.

The reported draft of the Convention between the United States and New-Granada, in settlement of the damages for the Panama massacre, reached the Bogota journals about the middle of November, and the last mail brings us their comments on it. It appears to have reached the Bogota Press in a somewhat different shape from that in which it appeared in the United States papers. I translate for the TIMES an article on the subject from one of the leading papers of the Capital, El Tiempo. This article, when compared with many I have read in the New-Granada Press, is very moderate in its tone. In fact, nearly the whole Press is opposed to the treaty, or to any treaty that shall acknowledge the responsibility of the Government for the massacre of the California passengers on the 15th of April. In the United States, with such an unanimous expression of the press against any proposed measure, there could not be the least hope of its being favorably received by Congress. But here, in New-Granada, the breath of official power is more potent than with you in turning editorial wormwood into delectable honey, and in divesting legislators of any exaggerated or inconvenient ideas that might conflict with a proper degree of Executive independence. So, if President OSPINA wishes it, he may not find it absolutely impossible to send back the treaty to Washington with his signature attached, and that, too, with the assent of the Legislative Department, notwithstanding the stormy appearance of the atmosphere in newspaperdom. By the law of the 18th of June, President OSPINA is not compelled to send the treaty to Congress for approval, unless it shall alienate a portion of the national territory, which it literally does not, as by its terms the sovereighty of the territory acquired for a coal dépôt is to remain vested in the Government of New-Granada—but perhaps which it virtually does, as is suggested in the article of the Tiempo. Perhaps I do not exactly understand the bent of the paragraph in President BUCHANAN'S Message, asking Congress to authorize him, "in case of necessity, to employ the land and naval forces to carry into effect the guaranty of neutrality and protection to the Isthmus;" but if I do, I predict that the newspapers and Government of New-Granada will soon have something more tangible to move their ire than the acquisition by the United States, in fee simple, of a hundred acres of ground in the Bay of Panama for a coal dépôt. On the whole, although there is a combination forming to defeat the treaty if possible, I think it probable President OSPINA will decide to submit it to Congress, and that the chances are about even that it will be approved by that body, although its provisions are as little agreeable to the "Latin" as to the "Vulcanic" race.

But whatever disposition the Congress of Bogota may make of this treaty, it is to be hoped that the Senate of the United States, in considering it, will look a little beyond the dollars and cents stipulated to be paid, and see if its provisions are calculated to protect the vast interests of the American transit across this Isthmus. Will the negroes of the Cienega be pecuniarily affected by the payment of two or three hundred thousands of dollars by the Government of New-Granada to the families who suffered from their brutalities? Is there any guarantee in the treaty that the Government of New-Granada will keep a sufficient force on the Transit Route to prevent the recurrence of the scenes enacted on the 15th of April? If so, will Senators inquire, before passing upon the treaty, what the character of that force is to be?—whether it is to be made up from Carthagena negroes, which always constitute the military force of the Isthmus, and who are the most brutal, bloodthirsty and revengeful of all the negroes of the Caribbean? Will they consider whether, in bringing such a black rabble to Panama, they are not adding to the bad element which is sufficiently predominant now in the population of this Isthmus route, and which in fact was the cause of the massacre of 1856? Let them remember that it was a black armed police, at the command of half-civilized whites, that murdered so many of our countrymen and destroyed such a large amount of property on the fatal 15th of April, and then decide if it be wise to add fuel to the flame in order to extinguish it. Let Senators turn to the demands of Mr. MARCY, made by Messrs. BOWLIN and MORSE last Winter at Bogota; seriously consider them, and the importance of the interests that prompted them; and if they find them, as I think they will, the only ones calculated to give real, undoubted security to a trade and travel which must for the next twenty years pass from our Atlantic to our Pacific Empire; let them be insisted on. Senators will find this question not by any means one of the least important they will be called to act upon the present session of Congress.

Many readers of the TIMES may not have forgotten some remarks in one of my letters a month or two since upon a church income of New-Granada, derived from what is called the "Censo de la Iglesia." The church had acquired a good deal of property in the shape of liens on houses and lands, most of them from donations, more or less voluntary, of weak-headed old ladies on their death-beds, or in requital for absolutions from heinous sins. Latterly, these liens began to weigh so heavily upon the present possessors of the properties, that a law was passed allowing them to redeem them on the payment of one-third or one-half the principal, according to the rate of interest stipulated, the nation becoming responsible to the church for the balance. The Government being a very slow paymaster, the church grumbled a good deal at first, but the prompt expulsion from the Republic of two or three of the most audacious of the priesthood had a most excellent effect, and the church finally acceded to this and other wholesome laws in respect to its future governance. But the Government is now in the hands of a party mainly indebted to the priests for its success, and they are hoping to regain some of their lost ground. The other day the Bishop of Panama issued the following edict against all those who are wicked enough to consider the civil as paramount to ecclesiastical law:

PANAMA, Wednesday, Dec. 23, 1857.

MY ESTEEMED SIR AND FRIEND: I have received a verbal order from the Most Illustrious Bishop of this Diocese, that, from the 1st of January, proximo those persons of this city who have transferred to the National Treasury the properties of the censo for the support of the church and its ministers, shall be erased from the list of Catholics; that, until they have repaired the damage they have caused to the church, they shall be separated from its pale—and that they shall be deprived of spiritual auxiliaries, and exonerated from the contributions for worship, comprehending also their families and the persons who may live beneath their roofs.

In giving this notice to you I am animated solely by the the desire that you should avoid the terrible penalty, and I pray that you will shun it at whatever cost and sacrifice. God guard you!

FERMIN JOVANE.

To Señor Don J * * * * de D * * * *.

The "Most Illustrious" EDUARDO VASQUEZ, Bishop of Panama, in dictating the foregoing, must have forgotten that he was dealing with a people who almost begin to doubt the truth of the tradition that their forefathers were accustomed to tremble at the anathemas from the Vatican, as if they had been bolts hurled from the hand of the Great Jehovah. He must have been dreaming of the successors of LEO the Tenth, the Adrians and the Clements of old Rome—of the auto de fé, the racks and the Inquisition of the Councils of old Spain—instead of the invitation of Jesus Christ to all those "who are weary and heavy laden." The Bishop will find that his Church, as well as all the churches of Spanish America have got to depend upon the voluntary support of the people, as in the United States, and that they must be brought to be not only theoretically but really subservient to secular law, and the sooner they recognize this fact the longer lease they will have from the encroachments of Protestantism, which in many parts of South America has already, with the spread of education, begun to sap the foundations of a system which has always prospered most where the people have been kept in the greatest ignorance. The people of Panama are very indignant at this interference with the sacred rights of family, and if there is no law to prevent and to punish it, it is more than likely the next Congress of Bogota, or the Legislature of the State, will find it necessary to frame one for the purpose. The Church will be lucky if it does not lose the balance of the property it wrongfully holds, in consequence of this despotic action of the Bishop of Panama.

In the meantime, several of the excommunicated have published letters to the Bishop in the public journals in which that ecclesiastic is handled without gloves, and the Editor of the Star and Herald, JOHN POWER, Esq., who reads the English Church service and a sermon every Sabbath to the Americans here, has given public notice to the heretics that they can attend Divine service at his office "without money and without price."

On Christmas night the American residents of Aspinwall gave a magnificent ball and supper to Commodore PAULDING and officers of the flag ship Wabash, to which the officers of the British line-of-battle ship Brunswick, and most of the American residents and principal native families of Panama were invited. The Superintendent of the Railroad, A. J. CENTER, Esq., liberally placed the facilities of the road at the free disposal of the convites from Panama, and more than one hundred persons, among whom were some forty ladies, availed themselves of his politeness. A run of three hours through the gorgeous tropical forest and flowers that skirt the line of the eighth wonder of the world, the Panama Railroad, brought the happy party into the valley of the shadow of—health, in the bosom of which is nestled the infant city of Aspinwall. The ladies were received in the cottages of the officers of the Railroad Company, and the gentlemen were provided for in the Howard House, the whole of which the managers of the ball had hired for the convenience of their guests. The ball-room was rather an unique one, it being extemporized on the splendid covered wharf of the United States Mail Steamship Company. This wharf is in the shape of a T, the upper part being the dancing saloon, and the lower part the supper-room, while the offices were used for the ladies' dressing-rooms. The floor of the ball-room was covered with nice canvass and the sides were first inclosed with the same material and then lined with the flags of all nations, each one being gracefully intertwined with the stars and stripes. Paintings of WASHINGTON, BOLIVAR, VICTORIA, CLAY and other great personages, occupied proper positions, and the niches and cornices were decorated with fancy pictures. The saloon was lighted by immense chandeliers, formed from hoops covered with colored paper, bayonets with the points pendant being used to hold the burners. The supper-room was also beautifully decorated with palms. The table, capable of seating nearly two hundred persons, was loaded with every delicacy of the tropics, as well as with fat turkeys, oysters and green salads from the North, the latter having been brought out on the ice-ships from Boston. At 9½ o'clock the ladies entered the saloon, where they were received and welcomed with exceeding grace by the beautiful wife of Mr. J. W. BOURN, agent of the steamers. Commodore PAULDING was received in a few neatly turned compliments by C. J. FOX, United States Consul, to which he replied in his usual frank and hearty manner. The Governor of Panama, when introduced to the Commodore, exclaimed: "I am glad to press the hand that struck the death-blow to fillibusterism." The dancing, to the music of the fine bands of the Wabash and Brunswick, was kept up till 3½ o'clock, and the officers of both ships asseverated that they had never attended a prettier ball in South America, or gazed upon a more beautiful bouquet of femininity than that from Panama which graced the Christmas ball at Aspinwall.

"Costa Rica has just twice the population of Nicaragua, and would, in the event of a union of States, control all the elections and hold the entire political power. To this Nicaragua would never consent."

Some time since I took the ground that Nicaragua having more than double the population of Costa Rica, the latter would never consent to a union that would make her the slave of her turbulent neighbor. Now, as the Herald has repeated the error it makes in the foregoing quotation, in one form or another several times, since, and as it is important that an editor who writes so much upon "Central American Imbroglios" as the Herald man does, should have some little acquaintance with the subject that comes under his pen, I will state that the population of Nicaragua is estimated at 360,000, while that of Costa Rica numbers about the same as the population of the State of Panama, viz.: 150,000. Please take notice.

The President of New-Granada has issued an official edict appointing Señor TORICES, of Carthagena, and late Secretary of State under MOSQUERA, Intendente-General of Panama. Señor TORICES, it is thought, will arrive in Panama by the next regular steamer. He is said to a be highly honorable and intelligent man. The law under which this appointment is made practically takes away the power from the Governor of the State, so far as Panama, Aspinwall and the transit route are concerned, and rests it in the Intendente.

The United States sloop-of-war Decatur, Commander H. K. THATCHER, is still in port. Her complement of men and officers, which is about 140 in number, has been reduced to 100, in consequence of the expiration of the term for which many of the men shipped. There is no British man-of-war in port. The merchant ship Humboldt, from Boston, arrived last week with coals to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. F. W. R.

The Revolutionary War in Peru—Difficulty Between an American Ship and the Peruvian Authorities at the Chinchas—Interesting News from Bolivia and Chili.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Sunday, Jan. 3, 1858.

The British steamship Bolivia arrived here on the 21st of December with dates from Valparaiso to the 1st, and from Callao and Lima to the 13th. She brings nothing from Ecuador.

PERU.

I have private letters from CASTILLA'S camp at Sachaca, close to the city of Arequipa, in which latter city VIVANCO still continues shut up with his revolutionary force. But little has taken place since my last worth noting. It appears the report is not true that CASTILLA had gained possession of a portion of the city. He made a show of assaulting it on the 30th of November, but was compelled to retire, with a loss of some 20 killed and wounded, after an attack which lasted eight hours. A Commissioner had been sent from Lima, by the Council of Ministers, to CASTILLA, authorising him to grant a general amnesty to VIVANCO and his forces in case he would surrender, but nothing had come out of it. Islay, the port for Arequipa, is in possession of CASTILLA. After abandoning Islay, the Apurimac went to Iquique, where she disembarked eighty men and took possession of the port in the name of VIVANCO. The Apurimac, at the latest date, had not retaken the Chincha Islands, but that event was daily looked for, unless the British and French ships-of-war should prevent it.

A correspondence between the late President ECHENIQUE and the enemies of the present Government of Peru, had been intercepted and published in the Lima Comercio. I do not find it worth translating. ECHENIQUE hopes, in this correspondence, that VIVANCO will succeed, because it will pave the way for his own return to power. He thinks that at any rate, CASTILLA has lost his prestige with the people, and that when an election takes place for President that individual will not be the successful candidate. ECHENIQUE is still in Chili.

In Lima everything was politically quiet, since the Convention was driven out.

The amount of guano shipped in the month of November was a good deal less than the previous month, viz: 42,155 tons register. Of this, 36,370 tons went to England and the Continent, and the balance to the United States.

There has been another difficulty between an American ship and the Peruvian authorities at the Chinchas. A quarrel took place on the ship T. B. Wales, between one of the crew and an Indian working on board, which resulted in the sailor striking the latter.

The Indian was taken from the vessel by an armed boat sent by the commander of the Peruvian war-steamer Izcuchaca, but, in the course of an hour the boat returned the Indian and took off the sailor. The sailor was lashed to a buoy in the harbor, in the hot sun, and was compelled to hold on to it for four hours. Captain BUER protested against these proceedings to the Commander of the steamer, who only answered that if he made any more trouble he should take the sailor's place on the buoy. The matter has been represented to Mr. CLAY, U. S. Minister at Lima.

General CASTILLO, who was charged with an attempt to get up a revolution at Lima against CASTILLA, and who was in consequence put on board a vessel for the coast of Mexico, has had his sentence commuted to exile to Chili, and sailed on the 28th of November.

BOLIVIA.

From this Republic there is nothing new. Dr. LINARES, who succeeded in October in getting into the place of Gen. CORDOVA, was very popular, and probably would remain so a whole month, and possibly longer.

CHILI.

The President was regaining the confidence of the people by appointing some of his political enemies to high office, so that all fears of a revolution were at an end. Congress had placed the whole business of constructing the Valparaiso and Santiago Railroad in his hands, which had caused some dissatisfaction, as it was thought there ought to be some checks and accountability in the disbursement of five or six millions of dollars.

It was feared that a vessel called the San Jorge, which had on board a large number of friars and nuns from France had been lost in the Straits of Magellan, as she was last seen there some seventy days since. A steamer had been sent to look after her.

The war-steamer Esmeralda, which had sailed some twenty days before on a mission to the North, it was ascertained had gone to the Mejillones, to assert the authority of Chili over the territory, and to protect Chilian commerce against Bolivia, in trading there. It was reported that Gov. BIGLER, the United States Minister, had desisted in the demands of Mr. BEELER, United States Secretary of Legation, for remuneration in large sums to the Boston ship Sportsman, for being forced away from the Mejillones, Mr. BIGLER becoming convinced that the vessel was acting contrary to Chilan law. He had advised the captain to return and load in a legal manner.

The crops all over the country promised great abundance. The gathering of the Wheat will soon commence. Flour commanded $5 75 ℔ 100 weight. Carolina Rice was selling at $7 ℔ quintal. For Refined Sugar, 250,000 lbs. from the United States and 350,000 from France was in the market, at 20c., but of course nobody would pay it. The amount of Sugars on hand in the Valparaiso Market was 3,792,000 lbs. Pine Lumber very plenty, and assorted lots selling at $46@$50. Barley was declining, the last sales being $1 77@$1 90 ℔ quintal, 6 months. Copper in bars, $22; Silver, $10 31 ℔ marc. The American vessels arrived within the fortnight were: Bark Gold Hunter, from Paita; Lionesca, from San Francisco; Vulture, from St. John; Muntaro, from New-York; whale-bark S. Perkins, from the fishing-grounds; ship Harriet Irving, from Boston; and ship Premier, from Belfast, Maine. There was no change in freights. Prices ruled from £3 2s.@£4 to Europe for ores, &c., from Calders and Iquique.

Mormon Preparations for Hostilities.

Exaggerated Reports of their Strength.

DEFIANT SPEECHES OF BRIGHAM YOUNG.

Our advices from Great Salt Lake City by way of San Francisco are to the 3d of November. The proposition to declare BRIGHAM YOUNG "Prophet, Seer and Revelator" of the Mormon people, was sustained unanimously in the Tabernacle.

The Deseret News of November 4th, says: The company from Carson began to arrive on the 1st inst., and will probably all be in by the 3d. This company with a few exceptions, embrace all who were sent on foreign missions to that region; also, several from California and Oregon.

The news referring vaguely to the burning of the Government wagons by the Mormons, says:

For these reasons our brethren have as yet been restrained from harming those officers and soldiers, else the late battle between the soldiers and a prairie fire, which Gen. HARNEY may record as his 106th, would have been the prelude to their surrender or being wiped out."

In reference to the Mormon prisoners taken by Col. ALEXANDER, BRIGHAM, in an address in the Tabernacle, holds the following language:

Did he not granny it off admirably about the prisoners when he WROTE! I need not assure you that not a hair of their heads will be hurt. He dare not hurt them; neither has be the first particle of reason for hurting them. He has released and sent in the younger brother with an express, under the alleged consideration of his having a wife and three children entirely dependent upon him. I wonder that the Colonel had not a young officer to send with him.

We subjoin full particulars of the news.

POSITION OF THE MORMON ARMY—EXAGGERATION OF ITS STRENGTH—SUFFERING AND POVERTY—INDIANS PROBABLY IN FAVOR OF THE UNITED STATES.

From the Los Angeles Star Extra, Dec. 8.

Mr. BELL, with whom we have had a conversation, informs us that he left Salt Lake City on the 8th November, and after two days traveling, short stages, encamped for a day or two. While encamped, an express arrived from the city, who informed them that Colonel JOHNSON had arrived at Ham's Fork, and taken the command—that communications, short but expressive, had passed between the Colonel and Gov. YOUNG, the result of which was, that Colonel JOHNSON ordered his command to be ready next morning for an advance on Salt Lake City, where he intended to Winter. Ham's Fork is about a hundred miles from the city. The Mormons were stationed at Echo cañon, about fifty miles from the city, through which the troops must pass. A collision, therefore, was inevitable, as the Mormons were in great numbers, and were being rapidly reinforced. A march of two or three days would bring the troops in front of their opponents.

The rumor we alluded to in our last, respecting the burning of a number of wagons, has been confirmed by Mr. BELL. The wagons were the property of the Government contractors, and seventy-six of them were burned. A body of armed mounted men came at night to the camp, told the wagon-master what they intended to do, gave him time to awake his men and remove their baggage and bedding, told him to select a wagon to take his party back to the States, which he did, and they then set fire to the whole train, burning up seventy-six wagons. The cattle were driven into Salt Lake City.

With regard to the Indians east of Salt Lake, it is more than probable that Col. JOHNSON has propitiated them, and they will be found, if not on the side of the Government, at least neutral.

In case of resistance to the troops, there is every reason for confidence that Colonel JOHNSON will force the passage of the cañon, and make good his advance to the City.

The force of the Mormons has been greatly overestimated; almost every available man has been enrolled. In passing through the settlements, Mr. BELL found that the men generally had been called out to the mountains; and yet the whole force fell far short of 10,000 men.

The Winter has set in with severity. In the city the snow was two inches deep, and in the mountains, where the Mormons were encamped, it must have been from six to twelve inches deep.

The Mormon army was in a very poor condition, badly clothed, poorly armed, and with very little provisions.

The families are represented as being in a suffering condition—wanting in provisions and wood; the Winter already commenced, and the men all called off to the camps.

Mr. BELL'S company had passports from Governor YOUNG, but were only asked for them once. It seemed as if intelligence had been sent ahead of them, and all knew of their journey to California but at one station.

Nevertheless, it was necessary, at each settlement, to call on the Bishop, hire an interpreter, and send them ahead of the company to treat with the Indians for their safe passage. By representing themselves as Mormons, using every precaution, and more particularly by the expenditure of over two thousand dollars among bishops, interpreters and Indians, the company succeeded in making their way in safety.

We have confirmation of the report that was circulated at the time, regarding the company that was massacred some time since, that they suffered at the hands of the Indians, in revenge for criminal indiscretions on the part of certain of their members. Small bags containing poison were found in springs, the waters of which caused sickness and death among the Indians. They mustered their forces, followed and massacred the whole party.

The Mormons who recently left San Bernardino for Salt Lake were met by Mr. BELL'S company beyond the Mojave. The train was moving along. There was no encampment on the Mojave, as had been reported here the past two or three days.

Messrs. KINCAID & Co., and GILBERT & GERELISH sold out their entire stock of goods to the Mormons at the prices offered by the authorities. They were told the people wanted them, and they had better take what they could get, or abide the result.

Mr. BELL was enrolled in the army of defence, but, on being informed of it, declined, of course, the intended honor. He, therefore, left the Territory. The company arrived in good health.

DEFIANT SPEECHES OF BRIGHAM YOUNG.

In the Tabernacle, on the 4th of October, BRIGHAM YOUNG made the following remarks:

I will say a few words before the congregation is dismissed:

As but few can be in our offices to learn the news that is brought in, I will say that on the 2d, Friday last, a messenger arrived with the intelligence that the soldiers were going up Ham's Fork. Previous to that I had sent by Lieutenant-General WELLS a copy of the proclamation proclaiming martial law and ordering the troops not to come here. They treated it as I supposed they would. They say they are sent by the President, are subject to superior officers, and intend to abide their instructions, and I expect they will until some other power checks their progress.

I do not know that anybody's heart burns, except it is to get a little nearer our enemies, and for the troops to undertake to come in here.

I have told you before, and I tell you now, that the result will be that Mormonism will be higher and greater in power than ever it was before. Our enemies will sink while we increase in power and strength, and enjoy an influence that we never enjoyed before, and the Lord will have His own way in bringing about these things. I know that all will be made right, and an all-wise, overruling Providence will bring us off victorious. He has led us to victory and peace, and has given us power and influence that we can sustain ourselves against all that can come to annoy, destroy, desolate and drive the Saints of God. God will fight our battles, and He will do it just as He pleases.

On the 8th of October BRIGHAM YOUNG delivered the following speech in the Tabernacle in relation to the advance of the United States troops into the Territory. He said:

I purpose to have read to you this morning some of the communications that have passed between our enemies and ourselves, for the people are anxious to know the feelings of the two parties—they are very anxious to learn the news. I am perfectly willing that they should know all, for my feelings and yours are very different from those of the world. You are aware that among the nations, the soldiers are never permitted to know anything about the plans of the officers; statesmen withhold from their constituents every policy they possibly can, and the statement of one of them is very true pertaining to their use of the English language, that is, to secrete ideas instead of revealing them.

If the Government of the United States have sent soldiers to this Territory, I do not know it, for I have had no official notice of such a circumstance, and you will perceive that I treat them accordingly. If they are sent by Government, they are sent expressly to destroy this people; and if they are not sent by the Government, they have come expressly to destroy this people; therefore, I shall treat them, as I have informed the officer in command, the same as though they were an avowed mob—not as I would those who have heretofore mobbed us, but as parties who have come to mob us now.

I have informed Col. ALEXANDER that, had his command been the men who have heretofore mobbed us, and the lying scribblers, and the wicked rabble who have all the city long been trying to incite mobs against us, they never would have seen the South Pass.

We have sought for peace all the day long, and I have sought for peace with the army now on your borders, and have warned them that we all most firmly believe that they are sent here solely with a view to destroy this people, though they may be ignorant of that fact. And though we may believe that they are sent by the Government of the United States, yet I as Governor of this Territory have no business to know any such thing, until I am notified by proper authority at Washington. I have a right to treat them as a mob, just as though they had been raised and officered in Missouri, and sent here expressly to destroy this people. We have been very merciful and very lenient to them. As I informed them in my unofficial letter, had they been those mobocrats who mobbed us in Missouri, they never would have seen the South Pass. We had plenty of boys on hand, and the mode of warfare they would have met with they are not acquainted with

I would just as soon tell them as to tell you of my mode of warfare. As the Lord God lives we will waste our enemies by millions, if they send them here to destroy us, and not a man of us be hurt. That is the method I intend to pursue. Do you want to know what is going to be done with the enemies now on our borders? If they come here I will tell you what will be done. As soon as they start to come into our settlements let sleep depart from their eyes and slumber from their eyelids, until they sleep in death, for they have been warned and forewarned that we will not tamely submit to being destroyed. Men shall be secreted here and there and shall waste away our enemies, in the name of Israel's God.

Col. ALEXANDER complains of our mode of warfare. They have two or more field batteries of artillery with them, and they want us to form a line of battle in an open plain and give them a fair chance to shoot us. I did not tell the Colonel what I thought, but if he had a spark of sense he must be a fool to think that we will ever do any such thing. I am going to observe the old maxim:

"He that fights and runs away,
Lives to fight another day."

Should our enemies venture upon violent measures, I design to so manage affairs that none of our boys will be killed, and in my answer to the Colonel I have told him pretty plainly what we shall do under certain contingencies.

The boys report their order of march to be, the Tenth Infantry in front, the baggage in the centre, the Fifth Infantry in the rear, and several flanking companies traveling through the brush as best they can. Don't you think they would look well coming from the United States in that way? That is the way in which they were traveling at our last advices, and it was said that their picket-guard declared they would not watch.

If the soldiers knew the facts in the case as do their officers, they would probably nearly all leave the army but the officers keep the soldiers in the dark. The last report is, that the officers had been telling the men that I had written a very favorable letter to Col. ALEXANDER, and that they were intending to come in.

When I think, are they in your houses? are they in your fields? I can answer, no, they are in the mountains, they are in the cold and snow, and if they continue, as those officers appear to intend to, upon the side of despotism and mobocracy, they justly ought to be served as we would serve all mobocrats. But we are here, and we are free, as BRANDEIS has said, just as free, in one sense, as we ever shall be.

Col. ALEXANDER preaches to me a little, stating in his letter, "I warn you that the blood shed in this contest will be upon your head," but that warning gave me no thought. But if the blood of those soldiers is shed it will be upon the heads of their officers.

What they will do I neither know nor care, for it will be just as the Lord God wills it. If he sees that we need their substance, He will turn things to that end; and if He designs them to be wiped out, He will either cause them to undertake to come here, or will overrule some other plan to accomplish that end.

Another year, I am going to prepare for the worst, and I want you to prepare to cache our grain and lay waste this Territory, for I am determined, if driven to that extremity, that our enemies shall find nothing but heaps of ashes and ruins. We will be so prepared that in a few days all can be consumed. I shall request the Bishops to see that the people in their Wards are provided with two or three years' provisions. There is enough already raised in many places this season to supply the people from two to three years, and I wish them to take care of it, though I expect that in all probability we will raise a great many crops before our enemies again come here to disturb us; and I expect that we are fully able to defend ourselves, and that our enemies will not be able to come within a hundred miles of us. I know that ten men, such as I could name and select, could stop them before they got to Laramie. And if we had seen fit to have sent such men this season, they alone could very easily have so stopped our enemies that they never would have got through the Black Hills. I count five such men equal to twenty-five thousand, and believe that two of them could put ten thousand to flight. I believe we are now where that could be done. I will take five or ten such as I can name, and if two can put ten thousand to flight I am sure that ten are perfectly able to do it.

Our enemies in the last treaty they made with us, should have stipulated that we should have gone only a short distance, so that we would not be out of their reach. They had better have made that stipulation, but they did not have wisdom, or they would have stopped us from going so far away. They drove us away from their society and allowed us to travel so far over the sage plains, that it is impossible for an army to bring provisions enough to last them here.

I have been told that the first artillery company, upon its arrival at Laramie, loaded up all the grain they could haul to feed their mule teams, and when they reached the Devil's Gate they sent forward after their grain from their freight trains, and then they had not enough to last them to Ham's Fork. It is impossible for them to load the teams with sufficient forage to last them to Green River; and the more men they send the more there are to eat up what the mule and ox trains haul, and the consequence is that the more men they send the worse it is all the time.

If they undertake to send fifty thousand men to Utah I will venture to say that they cannot raise so large a company in the United States but what would cut each other's throats before they traveled a thousand miles across the plains, to say nothing about any other persons molesting them. They would be cursing, damning and howling all the way. I know that the comparatively few scattered here and there over the country and in the mountains, can spoil their march before they could get here.

MORMON DETERMINATION TO LAY WASTE THEIR TERRITORY.

From the Deseret News, Oct. 14.

And do our enemies foolishly imagine that the Saints will deny their faith, forego the rights guaranteed by our common Constitution and every just human law, and tamely suffer themselves to be tyranized over forever? One might easily suppose that the prompt vacating and burning our own property would demonstrate that we have told them the truth, and that there are principles which we prize far higher than we do those perishable things which they have set their hearts upon. If they can take a hint, they may now be satisfied that we are not going to be again rode over by mobs, that we have not been fooling in this matter, and, as President BUCHANAN was plainly informed, that we will not again suffer such scoundrels, as some have been, to begin to be put in authority over us, for that was all the objection made in the "Memorial and Resolutions" that a high officer in our Government said "breathed a defiant spirit," and we defy him to find aught of defiance therein, except to black-hearted corruption.

If the officers and troops so uselessly, unjustly and illegally ordered to Utah, can now take the hint and are ready to go back, ceasing, as they should, to aid corrupt demagogues and speculators in tyranizing over American citizens, they will receive every requisite assistance to enable them to return to where they more properly belong and to where their services may soon be really needed. If this just and liberal proposition be not accepted and acted upon, they have already seen a little of what they may expect should they persist in carrying out the unhallowed designs of corrupt administrators of our Government, who are urged by office-hunters, speculators and the devil, to crush out every constitutional right, every vestige of truth and liberty.

Had the mob now on our borders been the hypocritical priests, the lying editors, the rotten politicians and cursed speculators who have urged on this movement, they would long ago have been utterly wasted, they would never have seen the South Pass. Our brethren have as yet been restrained from harming those officers and soldiers, else the late battle between the soldiers and the prairie fire—which General HARNEY may record as his 106th—would have been the prelude to their surrender or being wiped out. To "cut out the loathsome, disgusting ulcer," Government should have sent those who have, solely for their religion, killed the Prophets, driven women and children, the sick, the aged and the infirm, time and again in the dead of Winter, and those who have exulted in such fiendish conduct, with STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS at their head, and they would long ago have been food for wolves.

MEETING AT LOS ANGELES TO PREVENT THE SALE OF ARMS TO MORMONS—MORMON PLAN OF CAMPAIGN.

Los Angeles (Dec. 8) Correspondence of the San Francisco Herald.

Rumors were rife in town, recently, that the Mormons, the last of whom are now sacrificing their property, etc., leaving this section of country for Salt Lake, were engaged in buying up implements of warfare against Uncle Sam. Accordingly the following notice was posted and a large assemblage gathered at the place designated:

"The undersigned request that the citizens of Los Angeles County will meet this day, at 12 o'clock M., at the Montgomery House, in the city of Los Angeles, to take into consideration the necessary measures to be taken to prevent the sale, by merchants and others, of this county,

Judge NORTON was called to the Chair. He stated the object of the meeting; read the proclamation of BENJAMIN YOUNG, with severe but merited animadversions, and concluded by remarking that war already existed by the acts of the people of Utah; and it became the duty of citizens here or elsewhere, to prevent the secession and increase of power that was being arrayed against the people of this Union. Judge SCOTT, G. N. WHITMAN further addressed the meeting. Two Committees, of five each, were appointed to address a memorial to the Governor of the State and the Commander of the Pacific Department of the Army, asking that troops be sent here, and stationed at Fort Tejon, to guard against incursions into this valley from the Salt Lake country, under an apprehension that the stock and property of this whole region, which is only thirty days' march from Utah, may be suddenly seized and driven off before a notice would reach this place. The country is sparsely populated, and unprotected. The above Committee were appointed to examine if arms and ammunition were being transported from this place, and report, to-day, at 10 o'clock; but some of the members, not feeling justified in making the necessary examinations, the wagons drove off, carrying "aid and comfort for BRIGHAM." There is no doubt that a load or two also started on the Surprise, direct from San Pedro for Utah.

About 9 o'clock this morning, Mr. WM. BELL, since 1849 a merchant, of the firm of KINCAID, BELL & Co., Missouri, of Salt Lake, arrived in this town with his family. He left that place ten days after the last budget of news which we received, and reports that Mormons fortified at Echo Cañon, prepared to meet, and confidently expecting to vanquish JOHNSTON'S troops, who were rapidly marching to that point. But if this place should be taken, which Mr. BELL thinks will be done, there are more difficult places to pass, where a few can resist many, before entering the Great Lake Valley. It is also the design of the traitors to waste the army by ambuscades, and by picking off a few Notes on the Progress of Science.

DUPLICATE RETORT BOILER.—The duplicate retort boiler, invented by Mr. DUNN, of London, is described as an apparatus of simple construction and of great strength—the object of the invention being to render explosions more difficult, and, if an explosion takes place, to diminish its mischievous effects by giving it a more partial character. For the usual steam boiler are substituted cylinders or retorts, about ten feet long and nineteen inches in diameter, of best quarter-inch plate, with strong cast-iron ends, forming the pipe junctions. The cylinders are placed in parallel lines, and the water-supply pipe is connected with one end of each by a short neck, through which the water is pumped into all the cylinders, which are generally kept about half full. In the event of an explosion only one cylinder is likely to be affected. If the action of the fire is extensive upon some of the cylinders, their relative position can be quickly altered to meet any such emergency, or the cylinders themselves may be turned over without any difficulty.

COLORING STONE.—According to statements made by a writer in the London Artizan, building stone may be tinted in different shades by impregnating it with metallic salts, and then adding a precipitating reagent. By means of salts of lead and copper, with sulphuretted hydrogen, grays, browns and blacks may be produced. Copper and ferrocyanide of potassium give a red tint. If porous limestones are boiled in solutions of metallic sulphates, carbonic acid is evolved, and the metallic oxyd, combined with sulphate of lime, is deeply fixed in stone. In this manner sulphate of iron gives rusty tints, sulphate of copper a fine green, sulphate of manganese a brown, and mixed sulphates of iron and copper a chocolate. The double sulphates thus formed are also said to increase the hardness and consequent durability of stone.

PARIS-MADE FILES.—Professor VOGEL gives the following, as being the composition of those delicate files made in Paris, and principally used by watchmakers for polishing steel pins, and for the production of the deep polish of some parts of watches—the alloy being of silvery whiteness. The analysis of a file of this description, of six inches in length and five inches in breadth, made of a yellowish white metal, which was very brittle under the hammer, and had a jagged fracture, gave: Copper, eight parts; tin, two parts; zinc, one part; lead, one part. Prof. V. melted the four metals together under a coat of borax in the simple proportions named,—the result being that the alloy filled the clay mould well, and gave files of as good quality as that employed for analysis.

CONSTRUCTION OF HYDRANTS.—The plan of construction involved in the mode of making hydrants according to the invention of Mr. COWPERTHWAIT, consists in inclosing the hydrant in a case, one portion of which, at the spout, is hinged. To procure water the spout part is opened; this portion being connected, by means of a rod, with a valve placed down far enough in the ground to avoid freezing. When the spout door opens the valve also opens and allows the water to flow; on closing the door the valve shuts off the water. The valve employed is a flat or sliding valve, and it is placed inside of a water chamber; the liquid presses against the back of the valve and always keeps it tight, so that the use of a stuffing-box is not necessary. A hand rod extends up from the water and valve chamber to the cap or top of the hydrant, and by removing this cap, the chamber and appurtenances can be lifted out for repairs.

NEW ALLOY.—Some French chemists have discovered a new alloy which will answer well as a substitute for pure silver. It is composed of silver, nickel and copper, and these metals may be combined in any suitable proportions, as, silver, twenty parts; nickel, from twenty-five to thirty-one parts; and the rest, up to one hundred parts, in copper. By these proportions an alloy is formed that contains twenty per cent. silver, and equalling the third degree of fine silver. The copper employed must be pure, and the nickel has to be entirely free from cobalt.

LUNAR ORIGIN OF METEORITES.—One of the most plausible theories in regard to the origin of meteorites which is now held by scientific men is, that they are masses thrown off with great force from the moon, revolving around that body until, in the great eccentricity of their orbits, these masses fall within the circle of our atmosphere—once within which, and with velocity greatly retarded, our earth becomes their centre. One twentieth of the surface of the moon is found to be volcanic in its structure and character; and if the craters, as revealed by the telescope, are only in the usual proportion to the height and depth of the volcanoes, there need be no doubt that they have sufficient ejecting force to hurl large masses of volcanic matter to immense distances.

GEOLOGICAL PECULIARITIES PRESENTED IN THE GREAT DIAMOND.—The magnificent diamond found in Brazil, but now in Paris, and which weighs 254½ carats, possesses, independently of its magnitude, much scientific interest from the regularity of its crystalline form, and the indication it affords of the mode in which the diamond occurs. The general form of this diamond is what is scientifically termed a "rhomboidal dodecahedron"—that is, having each of its faces beveled by a face set on very obliquely, so that it has, in all, twenty-four faces. On one of its faces there is a pretty deep cavity, obviously produced by an octahedral crystal, which has been implanted in it. The interior of this cavity, when examined with a lens, shows octahedral striæ, showing conclusively that the crystal which thus left its trace was a diamond. On the posterior face of the crystal there are two other cavities of less depth also showing striæ, and one of them exhibits traces of three or four different crystals. On the same side of the crystal there is a flat part where the cleavage appears, and which is considered to be a fracture, and possibly at the point by which the diamond was attached to its matrix. From these facts it would appear that this diamond has been only one of a group of diamonds similar to the well-known groups of rock-crystal, coal-spur, or any other crystalline mineral.

IRON TUBULAR SHIPS.—Mr. HODGSON, of Liverpool, originated the plan of building iron screw steamships on this principle. In dispensing with frames, side-frames, flooring, &c., an increase in the strength of the plating for the sides was necessary—though to double the strength did not involve the necessity of doubling the thickness of the plate, as the strength of the materials increases as the square of the thickness; the strength being also increased by a bulkhead placed in the widest part of the ship, amidships, and by other bulkheads placed midway between the midships bulkhead and the bow and stern, and again by the interposition of stiffening plates, was to spread the strain along the vessel's side from one to four feet from the bulkhead. On account of the sides of the ship, under ordinary circumstances, being much weakened by the holes cut for the bulkheads to be secured to, the butting piece, usually placed over the joint, is extended along the line or strake of plates, and the rivets are spread over a wider area. By the construction of a ship in this manner—in fact, on the principle of a huge steam-boiler or tube, with rounded top and sides, capable of sustaining great pressure—the usual appendages, knees, angle-iron plates, and rivets, for gunwale fastenings, are dispensed with.

THE HIRUNDINE PROPELLER.—For this propeller great results have been claimed in England, its construction being as follows: A flat, many-jointed or elastic band, representing the "leech," is extended edgewise to the horizon in a curved, undulated line, within a square-sided chamber or tube, formed through the whole length of the vessel below the water line, and open at both ends. The vessel is built without distinction of stem or stern to move in either direction. The undulatory action is produced by rods passing at regular distances from the band to cranks or eccentrics, set in a spiral series on a shaft, which runs parallel to the tube, and this at each revolution raises and depresses the band in a continuous wave-like movement throughout its entire length. By this process, the whole column of water in the tube is discharged with great impetus from one of the ends, and in this manner the ship is impelled onwards in the opposite direction.

SAFETY-VALVES.—A safety-valve constructed in the following manner has been found very effective and advantageous in its operation: A small cylinder, occupying the place of the common safety-valve, is bolted to the top of the boiler, and it has a small plunge on the top, carrying a standard on which is secured the end of a lever working on a pin. In the small cylinder there is a packed piston, having its rod connected to the lever mentioned, a short distance from its jointed end. This lever is extended horizontally forward, and its other end secured to a spring balance. There is a small chamber, in which there is a plunger-valve inserted in a vertical tube passing down to the bottom of the boiler and open to the water. The rod of the valve is also connected with the lever. This valve also covers the mouth of a bent tube, which passes down into the fire box. The spring balance is set at the pressure to be carried, and the valve then covers the tube leading into the furnace. Whenever the pressure in the boiler on the small piston exceeds that at which the spring holds it down, the piston will rise, and also the valve which covers the mouth of the tube leading to the furnace. The superincumbent pressure of the steam then forces the water in the boiler through the tube into the furnace, and extinguishes the fire.

RAILWAY WHEELS.—A London engineer has patented an invention, which consists in forming the periphery or outside edge of railway wheels with wood, forced and pressed into and between suitable plates and chambers in such a manner as to form a very hard and compact surface, with the end of the wood so placed as to run on the rail. It is the same application of wood to the tread of railway wheels that has been applied to the bearing-boxes of shafts.

Dr. Spencer's History of the United States and the Wyoming Survivors.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The Valley of Wyoming is classic ground. Its history is full of interest, and many of its truthful tales far exceed the fictions of romance in the strangeness of their circumstances. Much has been written of Wyoming, in both prose and verse—many things which are true and some which are not true. The grave errors of historians, in relation to the early history of this famous locality, seem to be imperishable. They have been corrected and refuted, over and over, and yet they continue to be propagated and palmed upon the public. My principal object in this communication is to draw attention to a few of these errors, found in Dr. SPENCER's work.

This work is circulated through the country in numbers—is a quarto, with double columns, and, mechanically, is well gotten up. Upon the cover of the numbers is found the following rather high-sounding achievement: "Great National Work! written by an American, and Illustrated by American Artists!" So far as I have examined this "Great National Work," it seems, in general, to be characterized by a commendable amount of research and historical learning. I am sorry, however, not to be able to apply this remark to that portion of the work which relates to the "Wyoming Massacre." Here our author has been singularly unfortunate in selecting his authorities. In book iii. chapter v. pp. 23—25, the author draws upon Dr. THATCHER'S Military Journal, for what he seems to suppose an authentic account of the Wyoming Massacre. The points in this account which I dispute are the following:

1. That Col. ZEBULON BUTLER, who commanded the patriots, and Col. JOHN BUTLER, who commanded the royal forces, were cousins, whereas they were not related to each other by any natural ties of consanguinuity.

2. That Col. ZEBULON BUTLER was drawn out by the Tory leader, upon a pretence "that they were desirous of a parley"—when the patriot band went out to fight, and to do nothing else.

3. That, after the battle, "the fort was cannonaded most the day"—when JOHN BUTLER had no cannon with him at all.

4. That when Col. DENISON "went out with a flag to inquire what terms would be granted him on surrendering the garrison, he received from the ferocious BUTLER a reply in two words "the hatchet"—and that "the threat of BUTLER was rigorously executed." All this is incorrect. The fort was given up on the third day after the battle, upon terms perfectly honorable to both parties; although BUTLER subsequently disgraced himself, by allowing the Indians to plunder the settlers of their goods, contrary to the explicit stipulations of the articles of capitulation.

5. That "the remainder of the people, including women and children, were inclosed in the houses and barracks, which were immediately set on fire and the whole consumed together." This is all false.

6. That "seventy Continental soldiers," in "another fort, on surrendering without condition were, to a man, butchered in a barbarous manner, when the remainder of the men, women and children were shut up in the houses, and the demons of hell glutted their vengeance in beholding their destruction in one general conflagration." Eloquently told, but all false! There were not half so many "Continental soldiers" in the valley before the battle, and the few which were left made their escape before the capitulation.

7. That story of PARSHALL and THOMAS TERRY is a pure fiction. It is said one "murdered his father, mother, brothers and sisters;" while the other, "with his own hands, butchered his mother, his father-in-law, his sisters and their infant children, and exterminated the whole family." PARSHALL TERRY was in JOHN BUTLER'S army, and he had a brother on our side. This was bad enough. An eye-witness relates the fact that the young TERRY came into the fort, after the battle, disguised, to bid his friends farewell.

There were real Tory outrages enough committed without making up fictitious ones. One Tory shot his brother in cold blood, and another tomahawked his friend. For the honor of human nature, I am sorry to be obliged to correct these facts, but right glad I am that the fiendish outrages attributed to the TERRYS are without foundation.

The tale from Dr. THATCHER'S Military Journal was copied by GORDON, Chief-Justice MARSHALL, and, according to Colonel STONE and Mr. MINER, by Dr. RAMSAY. In RAMSAY'S History of the United States, published by CARY & SON, 1818, nothing of the kind is to be found—the learned historian confining himself to a plain, truthful statement. If RAMSAY ever committed himself to THATCHER'S fictions, it must have been in his History of the American Revolution, published first in 1789. Of this I am not able to speak with confidence, as that work has long been out of print, and is not at hand. But, in the preface to the second volume of the History of the United States, the learned author says: "The contents of this volume are, substantially, an improved edition of my History of the American Revolution." Under these circumstances a doubt remains in my mind whether Dr. RAMSAY is chargeable with having given his sanction to the story of the Military Journal of Dr. THATCHER.

Hon. CHARLES MINER, the venerable historian of Wyoming, wrote to Chief-Justice MARSHALL, correcting the errors into which he, together with previous historians, had been betrayed. The Chief-Justice frankly acknowledged his obligations to Mr. MINER, and corrected the subsequent editions of his Life of Washington, according to the suggestions of my venerated friend.

I can assure Dr. SPENCER that there are many—probably more than a thousand—living evidences that "the women and children" in the forts, after the battle of Wyoming, were not "consumed together." There are now many large and respectable families in Wyoming, who sprung from these same "women and children." The Shoemakers, the Denisons, the Darances, the Pettibones, the Myers, the Careys, the Bennets, the Gardeners, the Harrises, the Bedfords, and a host besides, are the descendants of the men, women and children who were in the forts at the time of the capitulation, and who, according to our author's authorities, were either hatcheted or burned up on the occasion. I had the good fortune to marry a daughter of a lady who was in Forty Fort at the time of the battle, and was then fifteen years of age. Had she been burned in the "houses and barracks," I and my children—if I had ever been a father—would have had a different history.

I have clipped the following from the Wilkesbarre Record of the Times, as having some bearing upon the matter under consideration:

"A survivor of the times of the Wyoming massacre is said to be now living in Connecticut. Captain E. B. COLLINGS has shown us a letter from Torringford, Litchfield County, Conn., which says that Mr. JEREMIAH SPENCER resides there, aged 88 years, with a good constitution and mind unimpaired. An article by Dr. GILLETT in the Hartford Times, thus speaks of him:

'Mr. JEREMIAH SPENCER now resides in Torringford, Litchfield County. He is 88 years of age, and in full possession of all his faculties, mental and physical. Erect in person, energetic in character, he is a fine specimen of the decendants of our pilgrim fathers and the pioneer settlers of this country. He is probably the last survivor of the Wyoming massacre. It is interesting to hear him relate the incidents that took place eighty years since. Of the Wyoming massacre he recollects distinctly the nocturnal alarm, his passage down the ladder in his mother's arms, and their flight into the wilderness.'"

It is unknown to me whether "Mr. JEREMIAH SPENCER" is or is not a relation of the historian; if he is, it might have been well for the Doctor to have consulted him before he committed that part of his work to the press which relates to Wyoming. But it is certain that "Mr. JEREMIAH SPENCER" is not "the last survivor of the Wyoming Massacre." Within a few months past I have conversed with four of this class, and they are all, so far as I know, now living and in good health. RICHARD GARDNER, of Exeter, is one of them,—he was seven years of age at the time of the battle. CHARLES HARRIS, of Dallas, is another,—he was thirteen years of age at the time. Mrs. DEBORAH BEDFORD, of Abington, is another, and Mrs. HULDAH CARY, of Brooklyn, Susquehanna County, is another. They were five years of age at the time of the battle, and remember it well. Mrs. BEDFORD'S maiden name was SUTTON, and Mrs. CARY'S was WIRKS. The latter lost three brothers and two brothers-in-law in the battle.

All these survivors of the Wyoming massacre retain their physical and mental faculties astonishingly. These old relics of the early and troublous days of Wyoming seem to have an uncommon tenacity of life, and to agree in holding out against the wear and tear of time. They are noble specimens of humanity. May their venerable heads go down to the grave in peace.

Fugitive Slaves in an English Court.

From the London Times.

A report appeared a few days ago respecting two remarkably good-looking colored girls, who were brought to the Southwark Court by police-constable 85 M, charged with soliciting alms in Blackman-street, Borough.

It appears that they were dressed very neatly in light colored clothing, such as is usually worn by female slaves in the Southern States of America, and walked by the side of the kerb, the elder sister carrying a placard in front of her on which was written "Fugitive Slaves from America," and the younger carried a money-box in which was a shilling in copper money. When before the magistrate they in the most artless manner stated that they were fugitive slaves, having last Fall escaped from a plantation in Kentucky, and found their way to Philadelphia, in the free State of Pennsylvania. They were then sent to Greenock by some benevolent person, with the view of getting into some sort of service. Being unable to obtain employment there, they came to London, and, faring no better, they had resort to an appeal to the kindness of the English people. They then told Mr. BURCHAM that they most likely could gain a livelihood if they had the means for purchasing wool for knitting caps and gloves, which they had frequently done in America. Mr. BURCHAM then, believing that there might be some truth in their story, granted them a trifle from the poor-box to enable them to buy some wool, when they left the Court, expressing their gratitude. Since then his Worship had received several small sums from benevolent individuals for their use, and yesterday afternoon, they attended for the purpose of showing their small stock of knitted caps which they had been enabled to make up through the kindness of his Worship.

Mr. BURCHAM told them since they were before him on the last occasion he had not only received several small sums for their use, but letters from various persons, some of whom were of high distinction, offering to take care of them and place them in comfortable situations. He had also received an anonymous letter which did not speak very highly of their characters, so that he had thought it might be necessary to make some inquiries about them before he answered the letters of those who were willing to assist them. He inquired where they now resided.

The elder girl said that they had removed from Bishops-gate-street to the house of Mr. SMITH, No. 10 Wentworth-street, Whitechapel.

Mr. EDWIN (Chief Clerk) informed his Worship that Wentworth-street was full of low lodging-houses similar to the Mint in this district.

Mr. BURCHAM (to the girl.)—Do you know Crown-court, Wentworth-street?

GIRL—Yes, Sir. We lodge in a house there at the back of No. 101. We have a room there, and pay half-a-crown a week for it.

Mr. BURCHAM—Does any one else live with you?

GIRL—Oh no, Sir.

Mr. BURCHAM—Have you a father and mother in England?

GIRL—No, Sir. My parents were slaves, and one of them died about eighteen months ago. We were about to be parted and sold when, by the kindness of some persons we were enabled to escape to a Free State.

Mr. BURCHAM—Is there a colored man living in the same house with you?

GIRL—No, Sir; there is a colored man living in the same court, but he has a wife and a large family. We have knitted some caps and sold some, and what remains of our stock you can inspect.

Mr. BURCHAM examined their small stock of knitted caps, which they had carefully placed in a box, and asked whether they had sold many.

ELDEST GIRL—We have sold several, Sir, and these are all we have left. We have not sold one to-day.

Mr. BURCHAM—Do you know the name of the vessel you came from America in?

Mr. BURCHAM—Who defrayed the expenses of your passage to Greenock?

GIRL—Some free colored persons in Philadelphia, Sir.

Mr. BURCHAM told them that an officer of the Mendicity Society had promised to make inquiries respecting them, but he had failed to attend before him to make his report. However, they appeared to have made an attempt to obtain their own livelihood by industry, therefore he hoped that their story was true. Under those circumstances he should order them to be paid 5s. out of the benevolent contributions to enable them to go on for a few days. On Monday next they might call again, when, if their story proved correct, no doubt they would be taken care of.

SEPOY CRUELTY.—We regret to state that a young lady, the daughter of a highly respected clergyman of this city, who married a gentleman connected with the Indian service about a year since, has just returned, not only widowed, but terribly mutilated. The Sepoys have cut her tongue out and inflicted other injuries.—Bristol Mirror.

MURDERS.

CONFESSION OF THE MURDER.

The Utica Telegraph has the following particulars of the terrible tragedy at Poolville, or Thompson's Mills, near Hamilton, N. Y.,—not Hamilton, Canada, as the telegram erroneously stated a day or two ago:

HAMILTON, Tuesday, Jan. 12, 1858.

A tragedy unequaled in the annals of crime occurred at Thompson's Mills, about five miles southeast of Hamilton village, on Sunday night. JARED COMSTOCK and CLARISSA his wife, were brutally murdered by their own son, WM. COMSTOCK. The murderer was arrested by Officer TUCKER, on a warrant issued by Justice PECK, about 5 o'clock, A. M., yesterday. The parricide is a man 37 years old, about 5 feet 7 inches in height: his clothing was besmeared with blood when found. He has always resided with his parents in this town and is unmarried. He has been drinking hard for some time, and is evidently laboring under the effect of mania-a-potu. He conversed calmly in relation to the awful deed, manifesting no concern for himself, speaking of the manner in which he deprived his parents of life, as if he had been butchering hogs. He says, for about four or five days something seemed to tell him he must have a number of hearts; this was repeated to him many times during the day; he seemed to live in Sherburne, and a wire came over the hill, connecting with the room, telling him he must have a number of hearts; some one who lived in Sherburne seemed to telegraph for them. "Three or four days ago I attempted to kill my father to get his heart. Yesterday, I went again, placed an axe in the room, intending, if I could find my brother and his wife setting down to kill them both at once. It seemed as if I must have both their hearts, but I did not find them so situated. About dark I went over to my father's, and found him and my mother sitting—she was sewing. I immediately struck her with a skillet on the head, and broke it. I then struck my father over the head three or four times with the remains of the skillet, and attempted to get the axe. After knocking my father down, I got the axe and cut out their hearts, and put them in the stove and burned them. This voice seemed to tell me that their hearts must be burned. After the deed I washed my hands, and after remaining in the house a short time, left and went down to A. GUSTIN'S. When I arrived I found my brother and his wife there, visiting. I told them I had some fresh meat up to father's. After remaining there a short time, I went down to the house of HARMON GUSTIN and told them to get me a quart of cider and bottle; and after obtaining it left for my father's house, without mentioning anything concerning the deed. On arriving I lay down upon the lounge, near my father and mother, and slept for some time—until near morning—on awaking I left the house and met several persons coming towards it. I do not recollect who I had informed of the deed previous to this. As they approached me some said "here is Bill." This was about eight rods west of my father's. They asked me what I had been doing. I told them if was none of their business. Part of the company held me while a couple of them went to the house, and afterwards they took me to POTTER'S, where I was arrested. During the night, after the deed I attempted to end my own life and thus close the tragedy. I afterwards went to my brother's house to kill him and his wife. I kicked the panels of the door in but they had gone away.

The Smith Trial in Philadelphia—The Wife's Letters.

The trial of THOS. W. SMITH for the murder of CARTER in Philadelphia is still in progress. A vast amount of testimony has been brought forward for the defence; all going to show that SMITH'S mind was unsettled at the time of the homicide. On Tuesday, Mr. JOHN MCCAULEY, father of the prisoner's wife, was called to the stand. He produced two letters written by Mrs. SMITH to her husband, after her confinement. She confesses her sin, directly accuses CARTER, and implores her husband's forgiveness. These epistles are touching. They read as follows:

MAY 5, 1857.

Will you allow me to say, my dear, yet injured husband: Your letter was received and read with feelings of the most bitter anguish—read it without a pain or passion of grief. Tom, I am not void of feeling. I feel as though truly alone in the world. Father, brothers, husband, friends, and all—have all left me. Oh, God, that I died the day I was born.

My dear TOM, I wronged you deeply. I kept the fatal secret from you. I did wrong in marrying you, but I loved you; yes, God only knows, I loved you—and do still. You are are the injured one; CARTER the guilty wretch. You wished me dead before you left me. I wish I was. You ask for a divorce. My dear TOM, if it is your wish, I will make no objections. I cannot; but will aid you in all I can to get you a divorce; it is right that you should separate from one who has so deeply, grossly injured you; but was not intentionally on the part of LIZZIE. TOM, you know my sensitive feelings. When this is done, I have given up all the tie that binds me to earth. Oh God, how deeply I love you! You have my heart; my very soul is centred in you. Oh, Tom, will you, can you forgive me? I most humbly ask your forgiveness—that is all I can ask of you. You speak of the once romping school-girl; yes, what am I now?—a heart-broken, dejected woman, without friends—thrown upon the cold world for assistance. Why, oh, why has Heaven sealed me doomed? No; verily, God has forgiven me, and I have been restored back to his fold again. Life has returned, but my poor, desolate heart cries for its lost mate. Oh, my poor, heart-broken, dejected, injured husband, forgive me! I confess I have done you a lifetime of wrong. I have made you drink the most bitter dregs of sorrow's cup. Oh, that Heaven would grant me to reclaim you back again! You ask my future lot. I wish that I could tell you. I know not where to go or what to do. Sickness and trouble have left me weak and miserable. Strength does not return; I have not left my room as yet. LEONARD'S moved a couple of weeks, and I must seek shelter somewhere. Where, I cannot say. The Poorhouse is as good as any where for me. I am not able to do anything as yet, nor will not be for some time, but never while earth stands will I throw myself out to the world as a public character. You shall never have it said to you that is the way I get my living; and as for CARTER, he has injured me for life. We will never meet again only when a third person is present. BERTHA wishes me to send the child where it belongs—to Carter. I cannot sleep nor eat; I can do nothing but walk my room at night. I must close. May the God of all goodness guide and protect you—cheer you up amidst this—is the prayer of her who was once your beloved, confiding LIZZIE.

MONDAY, July 20, 1857.

DEAR TOM: Do not throw this scrawl aside without first reading it; it may be the last time I will ever be permitted to write, either to you or any one else. Let me ask how and where you are living? As for myself—oh! my God, how long is this to last? You may curse me, but, TOM, I love you, and ever will while life shall last. Oh, the anguish, agony of mind, I feel—yea, I know life is fast sinking away. I live only for revenge on him who was my destroyer.

My brother is with me. He tries to still me. I will not listen, but like one who holds his hand upon his sword, so am I waiting for my destroyer.

The world is nothing to me when you are gone. Oh! TOM—poor, ruined TOM—will you not grant me this last, perhaps dying request; let me see you but once more; I could then satisfy you of one thing, and I ask no more. Think not I am here under CARTER'S doings; he has taken all that belongs to him. My brother pays my board; and as soon as I am able to travel, they take me home. Yes, home—I will never leave thee again. I scarce can write; I am weak, and tears blind me. TOM, TOM, how I wronged you: but forgive me, forgive your dying wife. May God, in his infinite mercy, take care of you, and if we never meet again, may we meet in heaven. I beg of you to let me keep your miniature and ring; it is a consolation to me, it is all I have to look upon. My health bids me cease writing. Oh, my dear TOM, you may read this without a change in your countenance, but oh, it may be the last you will ever receive from me. As it was in life, so it will be in death; I loved you still the same. May God bless you, guard and protect you, is my prayer. E. G. SMITH.

Will you please answer.

BRISTOL, Pa.

MURDER BY AN IRISHMAN IN INDIANA.

The New Albany (Ind.) papers of the 6th, have particulars of the murder of a Mrs. SCULLY, by her husband LAWRENCE SCULLY, an Irishman. Both parties were in the habit of getting drunk, and on Sunday week Mrs. SCULLY went to the creek near McDONALD'S pork house for some water, but being too far gone in liquor, she fell in the street and was carried to the house by an Irishman who happened to be passing at the time. SCULLY came home while the Irishman was in the house. His jealousy was excited, and he beat his wife so severely that she was unable to leave her bed afterwards. On Thursday, in a drunken fit, he again beat her over the head, face, and arm in a brutal manner, breaking her skull and otherwise injuring her so that she died.

RUM'S DOINGS—ATTEMPT AT MURDER.

The Bridgeport (Conn.) Advertiser, of the 8th, says: A man named CHARLES CANDEE, who resides in Oxford, was arrested, on the night of the 6th inst., charged with an assault upon JAMES W. BRADLEY, with intent to kill. It seems that CANDEE is a fellow of intemperate habits and of not a very good reputation. Mr. BRADLEY is the keeper of the hotel in Oxford, and has several times lately refused to sell CANDEE rum. CANDEE took offence at this, and has at different times threatened vengeance. On the night above mentioned, when Mr. BRADLEY was behind the counter, CANDEE coolly walked up and, drawing a pistol, fired at him. It was aimed too low, and the ball lodged in the counter. Mr. BRADLEY'S face was burnt, however, by the explosion. CANDEE was immediately arrested.

THE SLAVE "JENNY" SENTENCED TO DEATH.

On the 5th inst. the slave woman "Jenny," aged about thirty, who, a few weeks ago, murdered her mistress, the late Mrs. BAZIL HALL, at her residence in Alexandria County, Va., was duly tried before the Court of County Justices, in Alexandria, and convicted of murder in the first degree.

The leading evidence against her was the affidavit made by her victim, in articulo mortuis. The case against her was so clear that there was no question whatever as to the propriety of her conviction. The presiding Justice sentenced her to be hung on Friday, the 20th of February, proximo.

Her young child, some five or six months of age, was duly taken from her. She remains quite hardened.

The following is the report of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners to the Governor, transmitted by him to the Legislature:

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF THE METROPOLITAN POLICE, NEW-YORK, Dec. 12, 1858.

To his Excellency John A King, Governor of the State of New-York:

SIR: The Board of Police, in conformity with the 34th section of the act entitled, "AN ACT to Establish a Metropolitan Police District," and to provide for the government thereof, passed April 15, 1857, respectfully

REPORT:

The Commissioners held their first meeting on the 23d of April last, and the Board was organized on that day by the appointment of SIMEON DRAPER, of New-York, as President, and JAMES BOWEN, of Westchester County, as Treasurer. Due notice of the meeting was served on the Mayors of the cities of New-York and Brooklyn, who are members, ex officio, of the Board, but neither attended that or any suosequent meeting until the 22d of July.

The Commissioners proceeded in the discharge of their duties to appoint a General Superintendent of Police. They tendered the office successively to GEORGE W. MATSELL, JAMES R. WHITING, JOSEPH KEENE and WELCOME R. BEEBE, who declined the appointmevt. On the 13th May, FREDERICK A. TALLMADGE was elected to that office, by the unanimous vote of the Board. By the provisions of the act, the chiefs of the local police of the cities of New-York and Brooklyn were made Deputy-Superiatendents. On the 14th May, in pursuance of a requisition from the Health Officer, Deputy-Superintendent MATSELL was directed to detail five patrolmen to guard the public hospitals at Quarantine from the threatened attack of incendiaries. He refused to obey the order, and was tried, and removed from office for insubordination, and DANIEL CARPENTER, of New-York, was appointed in his place.

The act provided that the municipal or local police of the cities of New-York and Brooklyn should be embodied in the Metropolitan force, and that the local authorities should be divested of all control over them, after the first meeting of the Board of Commissioners. It had been so confidently asserted by the opponents of the act, that the Court would declare it unconstitutional that doubts were infused into the minds of the New-York force, as to the lawfulness of obeying the orders of the Commissioners.

Under these circumstances, and in view of the fact that it was a question of vital importance to the policemen, the Board refrained from assuming the control of the force, until the validity of the law was judicially determined.

On the 4th of May, Justice CLERKE, of the Supreme Court, affirmed the constitutionality of the act, and on the 25th of that month the Supreme Court, at a General Term, declared it valid and binding in all its parts.

On the rendition of this decisioe, the Commissioners assumed the direct control of the Police force. That portion on duty in the city of Brooklyn, with but few exceptions, obeyed the orders of the Board. Of the New-York force, fifteen of the captains, and about eight hundred of the patrolmen, refused to recognize the authority of the Commissioners, or obey the orders of the General Superintendent. Charges of insubordination were preferred against them, and they were tried and dismissed from the service, in conformity with the provisions of law.

The Commisstoners proceeded to fill the vacancies thus created. But they were arrested in their action by the resignation of SIMEON DRAPER, which left the Board equally divided in respect to appointments to office.

On the 7th of November, PELATIAH PERIT, of New-York, was selected a Commissioner in place of Mr. DRAPER. Soon thereafter, the Board was enjoined from making further appointments by Judge DAVIES, of the Supreme Court, on the allegation that the dismission of the old force was illegal. The injunction was dissolved on the 28th of November; but the opinion of the Judge who delivered the order of dismissal, in respect to questions which had not been argued before him, admonished the Commissioners, of the expediency of delaying to fill the vacancies in the force, until the rights and duties of the Board were finally determined by a judicial decision.

Some parts of the Metropolitan Police District have been seriously disturbed by riotous assemblages, and the necessity of a vigilant Police, extending over the densely populated counties adjacent to and including the City of New-York, has been strikingly illustrated during the past Summer. Immediately after the Commissioners assumed the duties which had been confided to them, they were required to protect the public hospitals at Quarantine. Soon thereafter, it became necessary to detail a party of armed policemen to Seguine's Point on Staten Island, to guard the buildings erected for hospital purposes by the Commissioners of Quarantine.

During the month of June, the Street Commissioner of the City of New-York died, and the vacancy in that office was filled by the Governor. Simultaneously the Mayor of New-York assumed the right to make the appointment, and the conflict between the two claimants to the office resulted in a serious riot. The force under the command of the Commissioners was resisted in the discharge of their duty by the Municipal Policemen under the direction of the Mayor. Turbulent mobs were assembled to prevent the execution of the orders of the Courts, and the peace of the City was only restored, and order secured, by a resort on the part of the Commissioners to the militia under the command of Major-General SANFORD.

On the 4th and 5th of July the peace of New-York was further disturbed by riotous assemblages, when it was again necessary to call in the aid of several regiments of the militia to quell the disturbance.

During the month of November the apprehension of sufferings by persons thrown out of employment by reason of the commercial reverses, led to the assembling of turbulent mobs, who menaced the peace of the City; but they were dispersed without resort to extreme measures.

The inestimable value of a well-disciplined militia, under the command of intelligent officers, has been conclusively shown during the last Summer in the City of New-York. Too much praise cannot be bestowed on Gen. SANFORD and the officers and men under his command, for the alacrity with which they met the requisitions of the Commissioners, and the resolute determination they evinced to repress disorder and unlawful violence.

The difficulties and embarrassments which have obstructed the Commissioners from the date of their appointment until the present time, have prevented the full development of the benefits contemplated by the legislature in the passage of the law. The opponents of the act have resorted to every artifice which their ingenuity could devise, to hinder the Commissioners in the performance of their duty. Suits at law, to test the constitutionality of the act, were carried to the Court of Appeals. The members of the old force were threatened with instant dismissal by the local authorities, if they recognized the order of the Commissioners. A rival police was established, called the day and night watch, which patrolled the streets of New-York and assumed the duties which devolved exclusively on the Metropolitan Police. Prisoners taken by the latter, in the very act of committing crime, were rescued from custody and permitted to escape from justice by the unlawful organized force of the corporate authorities; the station-houses, which by law were transferred to the Commissioners, were withheld; writs issued by the Courts were resisted, and were served when the police were seconded by men under arms; and in order to destroy the efficiency of the law, the corporation of New-York attempted to reduce the patrol force to five men.

But, notwithstanding these impediments, sufficient has been accomplished to indicate the wisdom of the Legislature in the passage of the act. Crime has never before been arrested with much promptitude; nor has an offence of magnitude been committed in New-York or Brooklyn since the establishment of the Metropolitan Police, the perpetrators of which have not been taken into custody.

The provisions of the act in respect to closing liquor shops on the days of election, and forbidding the erection of ticket-booths within a hundred and fifty feet of the polls, have had a salutary effect in preserving the peace of the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn. The State election in November, and the local election in the City of New-York on the first of this month, were remarkable for unusal quiet, and for the facility with which electors could approach the polls and deposit their votes.

The Commissioners desire to direct your attention to a very serious evil caused by the abuse of the powers lodged with the aldermen and magistrates of the cities of New-York and Brooklyn. It is a frequent practice with these officers to proceed to the police-stations, immediately upon the arrest of disorderly and riotous persons, and discharge them from custody. The certainty of immediate discharge incites to outbreaks against the public peace and discourages the Police in the performance of their duty. It is respectfully recommended that the law be so amended as to forbid the discharge of any prisoner between sunset and sunrise.

The suits which were prosecuted against the Commissioners, to test the constitutionality of the Police act, rendered the employment of counsel necessary. But the law forbids the payment of expenses other than for the purposes therein named. It is respectfully submitted that provisions should be made by an amendment of the act, for the payment of legal expenses.

The section of the Police Act which prevents the Commissioners from appointing any officer who has been dismissed for cause, presses with great severity on many meritorious officers of the old force, who were restrained from joining the present organization solely by the confident declarations of the local authorities, that the act was unconstitutional and void. The Commissioners respectfully recommend that the provisions shall not apply to officers dismissed prior to July 1, last.

It is proposed to establish, early in the ensuing year, a mounted police for the sparsely-settled portions of the City of New-York. That part of the City yet unpaved and but partially lighted, embraces an area of ten square miles. It is believed that property and life can be there more effectually protected by a mounted police than by the ordinary patrol.

The vast amount of merchandise afloat at all times in the harbor of New-York, or lying exposed on the piers of New-York and Brooklyn, requires for its protection a distinct police organization. The thefts daily committed in the harbor constitute a serious tax upon the commerce of the port. It is the intention of the Commissioners to establish a day and night River Police, which, distributed in boats, shall be engaged in visiting every part of the harbor.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed by the President of the Board.)

The Controversy between Capt. Graham and Meyer and Stucken—Meyer

a party should he return to this country. He never has been made a party.

A motion is now made by the defendant, that the plaintiff be compelled to elect which suit to pursue, whether the suit in equity or the suit at law; and that all proceedings in the other be stayed until the final determination of the suit elected to be pursued. When there is a suit in equity and a suit at law, between the same parties, for the same matter, cause and thing, one cannot be pleaded in bar, or in abatement of the other. But, notwithstanding this, Courts of equity will sometimes order a stay of proceedings in one until the other is determined.

The defendant in this suit is not a party to the suit in equity. His interest cannot be affected by the determination in that suit. A determination against the plaintiff in that suit will not deprive him of the right to pursue the defendant in this. The determination in that case can have no effect upon this. The motion, therefore, to compel the plaintiff to elect which suit to pursue, and that proceedings in the other may be stayed, must be denied.

For plaintiff, Mr. O'Conor and Mr. Williams. For defendant, Mr. Brady, Judge Dean and Mr. Lane.

RIGHTS OF ABSENT PARTNERS.

August Wetter vs. Herman Schlieper, Otto Haarhaus and F. W. Bohnstedt.—This case has been on argument for two days past. The plaintiff is one of the firm of Wetter, Schlieper and Haarhaus, and the defendants, Schlieper and Haarhaus, are the other partners. The plaintiff commences the action to obtain a dissolution of the partnership, and the appointment of a receiver of the partnership property for the equal benefit of the creditors, and to set aside an assignment of all the partnership property made by two of the defendants to the defendant Bohnstedt, in the name of the firm, on the 5th of December last. The plaintiff did not execute the assignment (his partners executing in the name of firm.) He was at the time of the assignment on his way from Germany, where he has been temporarily absent on business of the firm, and arrived here in the Europa on the 14th of December, nine days after, repudiates the assignment, and seeks to set it aside on the grounds—

1. That one or two partners have no power to execute an assignment of the partnership property to an assignee without the assent and concurrence of the remaining partner.

2. That the assignee is a non-resident of the State of New-York, where the assets are located, amounting to some $150,000, and therefore he is an improper assignee.

3. That he is a man of no pecuniary responsibility, possessed of no property, and therefore not a competent assignee.

Decision reserved.

Notes upon Broadway—The Cab Service and Crinoline.

From Charles Mackay's Letters in the London Illustrated News.

The New-Yorkers consider themselves, and are considered by others, to be a fast people; but they have no fast cabs, no Hansoms, and, indeed, cabs of any description. They have not yet got beyond the hackney-coach with two horses, which disappeared from the streets of London some five-and-twenty years ago. A few cabs, it appears, were recently introduced, but Cabbie, being in a free country, insisted upon fixing the fares himself, at something like a dollar a mile. As might have been predicted, the scheme did not work, and Cabbie, instead of lowering his price, disappeared altogether, and betook himself to other schemes and projects for making an easy living or emigrated to the Far West. The hackney-coaches with two horses are conducted upon such a system of extortion that one job per diem may be considered tolerably good pay. Let not the stranger who comes to New-York for the first time imagine that there is any law for him if he have any dispute with a hack-driver. The New-York Jehu, who is generally an Irishman, charges what he pleases, and this deponent had to pay two dollars (eight shillings an fourpence) for a drive of less than 2 miles, and the e was neither redress nor law for the grievance, nor anything but submission. Had a bargain been made beforehand one dollar would doubtless have been accepted; but a hackney-coach is, at the best of times, and in all circumstances, such an expensive and fatiguing luxury, that few people but the greenest of strangers think of using one. The great avenues that run parallel with Broadway are provided with lines of rail, on which numbers of very excellent cars, each capable of accommodating, with perfect ease and comfort, from twenty to thirty passengers, are drawn by horses—an arrangement which might be introduced into London with much advantage.

Broadway is the fashionable promenade—the Regent-street and Hyde Park, as well as the Cheapside and Fleet-street—of New-York. Let us take a look at the people. A few carriages—several of them with ducal or baronial coronets upon the panels, though on what principle no one can tell—mingle among the white omnibuses; and here the negro coachmen come into competition with the Irish. The ladies of New-York who go shopping in the Broadway are evidently fond of dress. Let them not be blamed, for what lady is not? Some of the journals have been ungallant enough to attribute the late commercial panic almost exclusively to the extravagance in personal adornment of the fair sex; but, without joining in this silly assertion, or saying one word in disrespect or disparagement of that charming and better portion of humankind, truth compels me to state that, as regards the mere volume and circumference of crinoline, the ladies of London and Paris are, to those of New-York, but as butterflies compared with canaries. The caricatures of the crinoline mania, which the world owes to its excellent friend Punch, if exaggerations of English fashions, are not exaggerations of those of New-York; and to get along Broadway, where there is no law of the pavement, as in England, and where every one takes the wall as it pleases him or her, is no easy matter. Were it not for the crinolines it would be difficult for an English man, accustomed to have the wall at his right hand, to make any progress, unless by a series of provoking zigzags; but, hustled by crinolines, the best thing for the gallant man who is in a hurry is to step off the pavement into the road. Nor have the fair ladies all the crinoline to themselves. The dark ladies share with them the passion or the sentiment of the hoop, (for it must be one of these,) and inflate their garments to the most ridiculous proportions. Little negro girls of fourteen or fifteen years of age, with bright-colored parasols, bright silk dresses of a width surpassing any credence but that of the eyes of the beholder, flounder awkwardly to and fro; and aged negresses, equally splendid and equally rotund, waddle like hippopotami among their Anglo-Saxon and Celtic fellow-creatures, as if they had been rigged out maliciously by some hater of crinoline and launched into the street to convert their fairer sisters to a more elegant form of dress, upon the same principle as the ancients inculcated sobriety by the spectacle of their drunken slaves. There is not only a craze for crinoline here, but crinoline itself is crazy—huge, unwieldy, preposterous, and offensive.

Personal.

Dr. Spohr has retired from the service of the Elector of Hesse Cassel, on a pension of fifteen hundred thalers a year. Spohr, though in his 74th year, is still in good health and spirits.

Madame Grisi has turned a new leaf in her libretto. She is announced as a "medium" of no common performance, Hume proclaiming her excellent in her new rôle.

RENEWING THE SLAVE-TRADE.—By a private letter received in this city from Loango, Coast of Africa, dated September 23, 1857, we are advised that the French have practically engaged in the Slave-trade under the name of apprentices, and that a ship, the Clara, of Bordeaux, was at Loango at the date mentioned above, loading with negroes for Martinique. A French war steamer lay alongside to protect her from the English cruisers, who would have seized her but that she had a French naval officer on board with orders to the French Commodore to protect her. The English are also using negroes as slaves at Sierra Leone. The French and English Governments are participating in a trade which they affect to deem so hideous. A barracoon has been built by the French at Loango to be used for the safe-keeping of the slaves until they are ready for shipment. There is no secret in this business, and no disguise is attempted.—Washington Union.

Beeves are sold by the estimated dead weight of the four quarters; the so-called "fifth quarter" (hide and tallow) is not reckoned in here as it is in Boston and some other cities. When cattle are weighed or estimated alive, the dead weight is reckoned at a certain number of pounds to the 100 lbs. of live weight, as agreed upon. The general rule in this market for medium cattle is 56 lbs. to the 100; 44 lbs. being allowed for the "fifth quarter" and offal.

We quote:

REMARKS ON THE BEEF MARKET.

Another hard day for owners of cattle. Last week we reported a large surplus, 653, over the average of the preceding year, with 500 left over unsold on Wednesday evening. To these have been added 3,774 fresh cattle, received since the footings in our last report, making the supply for the week nearly 4,300, or an excess of more than 1,100 over the weekly average of 1857. This number, however, (3,774,) varies but 40 from the receipts of the corresponding week of last year. During this week the sales at Bergen (800) have been larger than we remember to have been reported at that point on any previous week. There have also been pretty free sales at the down-town markets. Still, including the stale cattle, there were full 2,500 offered at Forty-fourth-street for to-day, including a few sales last evening. The quality of the stock this week is generally inferior, the majority being small and poor in flesh. But for this fact the surplus of beef would have been much larger than it really is. Indeed, it would require a considerable portion of the stale (left over) cattle of last Wednesday to bring the aggregate weight of this week's stock up to that of last week.

The sales during the week have been made of about the closing prices of last Wednesday. This morning the market opened very dull, and a gradual decline continued throughout the entire day, the evening sales being nearly or quite 1c. below those of the morning. The average decline of the day, as compared with last week's, may be put down at full ½c., perhaps more, if the low estimated weights asked and conceded be taken into the account.... Large numbers sold to-day at 6c.@7c. ₱ lb. for the dressed carcasses. This was about all many of them were worth, however. Butchers will find it hard work to realize even that price on skin and bone, with the present low sales of hides, and the disrepute "superphospate" has fallen into.... Western dealers are embracing the present favorable weather to bring cattle forward. They have usually met with serious delays at this season from the blockading of the railroads by snow. Ohio alone contributes over 1,000 head this week. But for this good condition of the railroads we should look for diminished receipts and better prices during the next market or two, as the reports of the low rates of last week and to-day will stop many of the cattle ready to be forwarded. Our observation has been, that two such low markets usually check supplies so much as to produce one or two higher markets immediately following. A fair supply is looked for next week—a diminution on the following week.

The table below and the special notes following will give the derivation of the principal lots on sale at Forty-fourth-street, with their general quality, and other matters of interest. These tables, &c., are condensed from copious notes made during a personal examination of the yards, continued through the entire day:

J. Bryant's 73 Ohio cattle were the finest in the yards to-day. Four of them were worthy of especial notice, which they received at the hands of butchers. One pair of them weighed at home 4,800 lbs., gross, and the other 4,600 lbs. C. Connell took them, at $270 ₱ pair, or a trifle over 10c. ₱ lb. They were included in a lot of twelve, which brought $115 each. J. Harris took another pair at $270. They were all of Bryant's own feeding. C. G. Teed, salesman.

B. Sudderth contributed 74 Durham grades of his own feeding, from Kentucky, which S. Ulery was selling for 9c.@10c. They were very good, weighing by estimate 825 lbs. net.

George Sage sold 170 head at Bergen, at 7c.@9¼c.; a few at 10c. This was more than similar grades were bringing here to-day. He was selling to different parties to-day, 47 New-York and Ohio cattle of various weights. Some of the fine oxen were owned by H. Owen, of Tompkins County, and were rated 900 lbs. net. Six of them brought $92 50 each, or over 10c. ₱ lb.

R. R. Seymour forwarded 127 medium Ohio cattle, weighing at home 1,325 lbs. gross. B. Bartram and J. A. Merritt were getting 8c.@9c. for them.

J. Bates sold 36 of his own Tompkins County Cattle at 6c.@9½c. ₱ lb. They were of uneven weights, ranging in quality from common to very good.

Loder & Jackson forwarded 57 light Indiana steers, for which Allerton & Myers were getting 8c.@8¾c. ₱ lb. They were common stock, rated at 550 lbs. net.

Miller, Haring & Gurney sold 127 State Cattle at Bergen at 6½c.@10c., and found a better market than the present. They were getting similar prices to-day for 75 mixed cattle, belonging to several owners.

D. G. Culver got 8¾c.@9¼c. for 16 of his own Dutchess County oxen, of fair flesh, rated 800 lbs. net.

J. C. Hoag was selling for himself and others, 34 Ohio and New-York cattle, at 8c.@9c. They were of fair to good quality.

S. Smith sold 60 New-York cattle for different owners, at 7c.@8c. ₱ lb. They were mostly common stock.

H. J. Miller contributed 88 light Ohio steers, for which Mead & Holcomb were getting 8c.@9c. Some sold yesterday at 9¼c. They were in fair flesh.

W. H. Harris was selling 59 medium Ohio Beeves, part heavy and the balance light, at 8c.@10c. ₱ lb. Also, 19 light, thin steers for J. Yazel at 8c. ₱ lb.

Thomas Lovelock had 97 Missouri Cattle, which had been fed since Spring in Illinois. They were rather coarse, weighing, by estimate, about 750 lbs. net. Budlong & Eastman were trying to get 9c. ₱ lb. for them in the morning. They were also selling 58 State Cattle for Allen & Dickey at 8c.@9c. ₱ lb., rated 650 lbs. net., and of mixed quality.

MILCH COWS WITH CALVES.

Milch Cows are sold at each of the above yards, usually with their Calves at their sides. The prices vary somewhat with the supply and demand, and vary greatly, of course, upon the milking value. The particular fancy of the buyer has also considerable to do with the price. Not unfrequently a Cow is sold at $90@$100, or even $120. The general price throughout the year for ordinary Cows is $30 to $40 or $50. Quite a number sell above $50, and more, perhaps, below $30. We often see apologies for Cows go at $20@$25. The weekly reports from the different yards will give the weekly fluctuations.

The receipts show an increase of numbers, but the market is scarcely as good as last week. There is a surplus of animals on sale just now.

Allerton reports receipts of 15 fresh cows which sold slowly at $30@$40 for good, and $50@$60 for extra animals. The demand continues light.

Browning reports receipts of 49 Milch Cows, selling at $25@$30 for common; $30@$40 for good, and $50@$65 for extras. The market is overstocked, in consequence of a light demand.

Chamberlin reports 47 Milch Cows, selling at $20@$35 for common; $40@$50 for good; and $50@$60 for extras.

O'Brien reports 106 Milch Cows, selling at $25@$30 for common; $35@$45 for good, and $50@$60 for extras. The supply is large, and sales are slow.

VEAL CALVES.

Veal Calves are sold by live weight, each animal being weighed alive at the time of sale. "Bobs"—that is, Calves a few days old—are usually sold by the head at such prices as can be agreed upon, sometimes for but little more than the skin is worth. The principal places of sale are Allerton's, Browning's, Chamberlin's and O'Brien's.

We notice more good calves in market than formerly, and sales have been quicker at higher figures in consequence.

Allerton reports receipts of 132 Veal Calves, selling at 5c.@7c. for good animals. There is a short supply for to-day. Prices about as last week.

Browning reports receipts of 36 Veal Calves, selling generally at 5c.@7c. The quality is better than usual, and the trade pretty good. The market is just supplied.

O'Brien reports 46 Veal Calves, selling at 5c.@6¼c. Stock mostly good and selling well, although there are enough for the wants of butchers.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

These are chiefly sold at Allerton's, Browning's, and Chamberlin's, at so much ₱ head for a particular lot of Sheep or Lambs, or of the two together. They are also frequently sold by live weight, as this is readily ascertained. The actual prices at the different yards seldom vary greatly. The difference in reputed prices is generally due to variation in the quality. When they are sold by weight, it is usually the net weight, which is ordinarily one-half what they weigh when alive, the pelt and offal making the other half. If fat and small-boned, they will dress 55 lbs., and in some cases 60 lbs., ₱ hundred. The average run is about one-half the live weight.

The foolings at the several Sheep markets give an increase of some 1,500 head over last week. The increase is not confined to numbers merely, but a large proportion have been unusually heavy. We noticed sales of single animals at $14 each. The market generally is scarcely as quick as last week.

Allerton reports receipts of 1,261 Sheep and Lambs, selling at 6c.@9c. ₱ lb., dressed weight. The supply for to-day is moderate and sales are slow at former prices. Many fine sheep are now sent in and bring good prices—a few $12@$14 each. These are very large and fat.

Browning reports receipts of 2,812 Sheep and Lambs, selling generally at 7c.@9c. ₱ lb., net weight. The receipts, though not large, are more than sufficient for the demand and sales are slow. There is an improvement in the quality generally, and a few of the animals have been very fine, bringing $10@$12 each.

Chamberlin reports receipts of 3,782 Sheep and Lambs, selling at $3 50@$5 50 ₱ head.

Sheep Brokers' sales at Browning's for the week ending Jan. 12:

Jas. McCarty (agent) reports sales of
50 Sheep at	$200 00	10 Sheep at	65 00
133 Sheep at	448 62	3 Sheep at	31 50

2 Sheep at	24 00

R. H. Hume reports sales of 800 Sheep and Lambs, at $3@$6 ₱ head.

SWINE.

These are sold alive at so much ₱ lb. gross or live weight. Considerable numbers are sold at Allerton's, Forty-fourth-street, and at various other yards, while large droves are sold direct from the cars or boats, and driven immediately to the various slaughter-houses. Arrivals have been pretty free, and prices have fallen about ½c. from last week. There is a fair demand, and most lots have found purchasers, although a few are still on the market. A moderate advance is anticipated.

Allerton reports receipts of 2,508 hogs during the past week. Markets are overstocked and prices are depressed. Selling to-day at 4⅞c.@5½c., gross, and 6c. net for corn-fed hogs.

CORN-FED.

Live	4½c.@5c.	Dressed	6c.@6½c.

Arrivals free.

G. W. Dorman, commission merchant, Nos. 5 and 6 Centre-row, West Washington Market, reports:

Canadian is doing better. Sales 650 bbls. Superfine to extra, at $4 30@$6 ₱ bbl. Southern is sparingly inquired for, yet is held with more firmness. Sales 900 bbls. inferior mixed to choice extra at $4 25@$7 75 ₱ bbl. Rye Flour is in slack demand at languid prices—$3@$4 for fine to superfine ₱ bbl. Corn Meal is quiet and languid, at $3@$3 20 for Jersey, and $3 50 for Brandywine, ₱ bbl.

FOREIGN LIQUORS—The demand is reviving very tardily, and prices are still, for the most part, nominal. A few jobbing transactions have occurred, —buyers securing favorable terms, for cash.

FRUIT—Raisins are quiet, being stiffly held at $2 35@$2 40 for layer, and $2 05@$2 10 for bunch, ₱ whole box; smaller pkgs. at proportionate figures. Sales were also reported of nearly 50,000 bushels Chicago Spring, represented as having been taken, within a few days, at about 97c.@98c. ₱ bushel, for export. Corn is in demand and is advancing. Sales 13,000 bushels, in lots, at 74c. for new yellow and White Southern, afloat; and 74 for old mixed Western, in store, ₱ bushel. The supply has been reduced and the receipts are very light. Holders ask 73c.@74c. for Northern Rye, and 70c.@82c. for State Barley, ₱ bushel, but the inquiry is tame. NEWS OF THE DAY.

The steamship Star of the West, with the California mails of Dec. 20 and over $1,600,000 in treasure, arrived at this port last evening. She brings particulars of the surrender of Colonel ANDERSON, with the remnant of the Walker army on the San Juan, to Captain SANDS, of the Susquehanna. It seems that Colonel ANDERSON was very hard pressed by the united Costa Rican and Nicaraguan forces, and not only submitted to the interference of the United States naval officers, but even solicited their assistance. Our Aspinwall correspondent furnishes us with full particulars of this final scene of the second Nicaraguan invasion under the auspices of WILLIAM WALKER.

The news from California by this arrival is very scanty, and offers little room for comment. From Oregon we learn that the Slavery clause in the Constitution was rejected by a still larger majority than was at first reported.

By way of San Francisco we receive late and important intelligence from Utah. Particulars are given of the plan adopted by the Mormons to arrest the progress of United States troops. It is stated that the Mormon force has been very much exaggerated, and that, in reality, they will not be able to offer any serious resistance. BRIGHAM YOUNG, as will be seen from his speeches in the Tabernacle, continues to preach treason, and declares his determination to fight. From his remarks, as well as from an article in the Deseret News, that we copy elsewhere, it is inferred that the intention of the Mormons is to destroy all their property and then emigrate to more Northern regions.

Our Panama correspondent transmits his usual summary of news from South America. The revolution in Peru remained in statu quo; no decided advantage appears to have been gained by either party. Tranquility had been restored in Lima. From Chili and Bolivia there is nothing of special interest. The New-Granadian press were occupied in discussing the Convention with the United States,—a copy of which had just reached Bogota.

In the United States Senate, yesterday, Mr. DOOLITTLE, of Wisconsin, introduced a joint resolution directing the presentation of a medal to Commodore PAULDING. Subsequently Mr. BROWN, of Mississippi, gave notice of his intention to offer an amendment, conveying a vote of censure to that officer. This will have the effect, when the matter comes up, of testing the relative strength of the friends and opponents of Gen. WALKER in the Senate. The motion to reconsider the vote amending the joint resolution defining the power of the President relative to the nomination to active service of naval officers affected by the action of the late Retiring Board, was warmly debated, and finally the motion prevailed and the amendment was rejected, after which the resolution was passed with another amendment, limiting the power of the President to nominate to six months after the passage of the act. In the House, the day was spent in debate in Committee of the Whole on the President's annual Message.

Among the petitions presented in the State Senate, yesterday, was one for the appropriation of one-half the liquor-license money to the erection of an inebriate asylum. Notice was given of intention to introduce a bill providing for the redemption of real estate sold under foreclosure of mortgage, and another to amend the law exempting homesteads from execution. The bill authorizing the Methodist Episcopal Churches of Brooklin to sell their burial grounds was reported favorably. In the Assembly, a motion was made to adopt the rules and orders of the last Assembly, but it was lost, and the farce of balloting for a Speaker was then continued until the adjournment. When it will be concluded it is difficult to say.

The Richmond Enquirer, which has always been the organ of Governor WISE, deals in a very gingerly manner with his recent letter on Kansas affairs. It admits the truth and justice of its fundamental principles, and declares that the Lecompton Convention was guilty of a great wrong in refusing to submit the whole Constitution to the popular vote. But it thinks the time has gone by for remedying that defect, and that Kansas should be immediately admitted under the Lecompton Constitution.

Judge RUSSELL sentenced a man named MATTHEW BOWEN for highway robbery, in the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, to ten years and nine months in the State Prison. The evidence against BOWEN was clear. A night or two before New-Year's he met JOSEPH DAUBER, a sailor, dragged him up an alley-way, knocked him down, and attempted to rob him. He was arrested before he could get away. WILLIAM PAGEN, mate of the bark Pawtucket, pleaded guilty to robbing the captain of that vessel of Spanish gold coin to the amount of $4,400. He made restitution of part of the money, and was sentenced to four years and nine months in the State Prison. LEWIS DERENBERG, convicted of grand larceny, was sentenced to three years and nine months. MICHAEL SULLIVAN, convicted of burglary in the third degree, was sentenced to four years and nine months. JOHN GRIFFIN pleaded guilty to burglary in the same degree, and was sent to the State Prison for three years and three months. JOHN HARTLEY, for forgery in the second degree, was sentenced to two years imprisonment. Some minor sentences were passed.

Officers WM. S. MILLER, PETER DUFFY and OSCAR VAN TASSEL, of the Eleventh Ward, were arrested yesterday, charged with the unjustifiable shooting of PATRICK VAUGHN, during a disturbance at the Eighth poll-district of the Eleventh Ward, on the night of the last December election. VAUGHN, it will be remembered, died from his wounds, when a Coroner's inquest was held and a verdict rendered that the shooting was done in self-defence, and the police not to blame. Several affidavits of parties witnessing the affray have since been submitted to Justice CONNOLLY, setting forth that nothing occurred to justify the shooting of the deceased, and upon these affidavits warrants for the arrest of the officers named were issued. The examination in the case will be had at 10 o'clock this morning. General NYE acts as counsel for the accused.

In answer to a call from Mr. MAGUIRE and others, representing that portion of the General Workingmen's Association who reside in the Eleventh, Seventeenth and Eighteenth Wards, there was a small gathering at Jackson Hall, last evening, to elect delegates to a Convention to be held on the 16th inst. Very little progress was made, as the reports were not in. The object of the Association is to organize a political party "composed of every industrious freeman who disdains to rob or to beg." So far as known at the meeting last evening, the Association numbers 2,000 Frenchmen, 1,300 Germans, and 108 Irishmen. The ratio of representation in the Convention is to be one delegate to twenty-five members of the organization. Between now and the time for holding the Convention, Mr. MAGUIRE anticipates a large increase of Irish members. When the organization is complete a Central Committee, consisting of three of the English and three of the German tongue, is to be chosen by secret ballot.

The first meeting of the Board of Education for 1858, was held last night. Mr. NEILSON was elected President, and Mr. THOMAS BOESE Clerk. Executive Committees were also chosen, and the Board adjourned at 8½ o'clock. President AND. H. GREEN declined to stand as a candidate for re-election. Mr. BOESE succeeds Mr. ALBERT GILMEY, who has acted as Clerk of the Board for nearly eight years,—a term of service almost unprecedented now-a-days.

The Central Republican Committee met last night in Stuyvesant Institute, to organize for 1858. After a stormy debate on the matter of the contested seats in the First and Eighteenth Wards, the committee organized by the reappointment of JOHN A. KENNEDY as chairman.

A negro dropped dead last evening in front of the Astor House, from the effects of a stab, but the name of the deceased, where or why he was stabbed, and by whom, is a mystery. The deceased was seen a moment previous coming up Vesey-street in company with another negro, who had a banjo in his hand. As soon as the deceased fell his companion darted out of sight. From the fact of blood having been traced some distance down Vesey-street, and no outcry having been made by the deceased, it is believed that the stabbing must have taken place in some groggery or other place he had been visiting. The body was taken to the Third Ward Station-house, where an inquest will be held to-day.

A man named JOHN DOHERTY was arrested at 5 o'clock last evening for passing a counterfeit $10 bill on the Exchange Bank of Batavia, (N. Y.) at the clothing-store No. 364 Grand-street.

The General Markets, yesterday, were brisker and somewhat firmer, for Flour. Wheat was in rather better request, and some large sales were reported for export. Prices varied but slightly. Corn was moderately inquired for at improved rates. The supply was limited. Cotton was more sought after, and it closed a shade higher. Provisions were quiet at about former quotations. Coffee was pretty freely dealt in at full prices. Sugars and Molasses were heavy and drooping. Other branches of trade appeared about the same as previously represented.

The Cattle markets were again largely supplied yesterday. During two weeks the City receipts of Beef Cattle have been 7,570 head, an excess of 1,384 over the average supply for two weeks in 1857. The freedom from snow-blockades on the railroads greatly facilitates forwarding animals from the Western States, and the receipts are quite large from that direction. Ohio has alone contributed over one thousand cattle during the present week. The price of Beef went down again yesterday, the average sales at Forty-fourth-street being nearly 1c. below those of last week, and the average sales of the day fully ½c. The total decline in two weeks ha sbeen 1½c.@2c. ℔ lb. on the net weight, or 15 to 20 ℔ cent. on the wholesale cut of beef to the butchers. The consumers will of course share in this.

The Cuban Question—Mysterious Movements at Washington.

We have sundry interesting rumors from Washington, all encouraging the belief that, while President BUCHANAN is very anxiously looking one way, he is very diligently, though quietly, rowing in another. While the whole country is wondering how he can possibly escape from the entanglement of Kansas and Central American affairs, he is turning the whole current of his efforts and all the resources of his ingenuity to the acquisition of CUBA. He very justly supposes that the accomplishment of this object would divert public attention entirely from the minor points of his Administration, and rally to its support the great mass of the people in all sections of the country.

It is scarcely necessary to recall the several occasions upon which Mr. BUCHANAN has indicated his deliberate and determined purpose to make the acquisition of Cuba the leading act of his administration. His declarations in the celebrated Ostend Manifesto are explicit and full. The Cincinnati Platform alluded to the subject in very clear and unmistakable terms. In his conversations with Senator BROWN, of Mississippi, previous to the election, as reported by the latter in a letter which became very familiar during the canvass, Mr. BUCHANAN said, in the most unreserved manner, that he considered the acquisition of Cuba a matter of the utmost importance to this country, and that if he could secure its accomplishment during his term, he would cheerfully "resign and hand the office over to Mr. BRECKINRIDGE." Our Washington correspondent some weeks since stated that the President was desirous of appointing Mr. BELMONT to the Spanish Mission, from a knowledge of his sentiments on the subject, and from a belief that his connection with the great house of ROTHSCHILD would give him peculiar facilities for effecting its peaceful purchase. We now learn that this intention is still cherished, and that the President only awaits indications of public sentiment upon it to carry it into effect. We should consider it very doubtful whether Mr. BELMONT would return to Europe on such an errand; but we have no doubt whatever of the President's correctness in supposing that he would have peculiar advantages for conducting such a negotiation to a successful issue.

But it is not alone to peaceful diplomacy that the President is turning his attention. The Washington Union had a significant article a day or two since, which was copied in the TIMES, denouncing the private fillibusterism of WALKER and saying that "it would be a very easy matter to find grounds of quarrel" with any of the countries whose territories we might consider needful for our security, and that it would be much better to seize them in open war than by such movements as those which have been made upon Nicaragua. And an incident which has recently come to our knowledge, in connection with the Military Department of the Government, gives additional importance to these declarations.

Some four or five weeks since, the rumor was current in military circles that Gen. TORTEN, the head of the Engineer Department at Washington, had had unpleasant differences with the Secretary of War, and that he had received a furlough, which would permit his absence from the Capital for six months. We are now informed that he has been ordered upon a tour of inspection of all the military fortifications upon the Gulf, and it is also stated that this tour of inspection will be extended to the Moro Castle at Havana. Of course he will visit Cuba for his health, as everybody does: but as his bureau at Washington proved to be, upon the breaking out of the Mexican war, in possession of a very perfect plan of the fortifications at Vera Cruz, it is not at all unlikely that upon his return it will be equally prepared for a similar contingency in the case of Cuba.

All these things do not amount to positive evidence of an intention on the part of the President to take any steps towards effecting the acquisition of Cuba:—but as indications of a probable purpose, they are certainly worthy of some degree of public attention.

THE INDIANA DEMOCRACY.—It was announced a few days since, in a special telegram to the TIMES from Washington, that the Democratic State Convention of Indiana, had adopted resolutions sustaining Senator DOUGLAS in his position upon the Kansas question. The statement has since been contradicted, but we find it substantially confirmed by the official report of the proceedings of the Convention contained in the Indianapolis Sentinel of the 9th inst.

It seems from this report, that during the day resolutions were adopted indorsing the Federal Administration, and declaring that "JESSE D. BRIGHT and GRAHAM N. FITCH, the Senators elect, are worthy the high position in which they were unanimously placed by their party." At the evening session the following resolution was adopted by a vote of 378 to 115, which was afterwards made unanimous:

"Resolved, That we are still in favor of the great doctrine of the Kansas-Nebraska bill; and that by a practical application of that doctrine the people of a State or of a Territory are vested with the right of ratifying or rejecting at the ballot-box any Constitution that may be formed for their Government; and that hereafter no Territory should be admitted into the Union as a State without a fair expression of the will of the people being first had upon the Constitution accompanying the application for admission."

The Washington Union calls special attention to the word "hereafter" in this resolution, and endeavors to found an argument upon its use in favor of the admission of Kansas without any such submission of its Constitution to the popular vote. The attempt is futile. The admission of Kansas into the Union is just as much a future event as the admission of Mexico or Cuba:—and the word "hereafter" applies to it, therefore, quite as directly and unmistakeably as to any other case, real or supposed.

It is a little singular to find the Washington Union so anxious to evade, in the case of Kansas, the application of a general principle which it admits to be true, and which it concedes should be applied to every other case that may arise. The inexpediency of such a course is not a whit less manifest than its absurdity.

Has Anything Been Lost by the Panic?

It requires very little argument to demonstrate that the community suffers no injury from gamblers' losses, beyond the loss of the time wasted at the gaming-table, which might have employed in some useful occupation. The losses on the Stock Exchange are of a similar nature. Individuals may be "lamed for life," and princely fortunes may be swept away in an hour; but the community suffers no diminution of wealth, and all the elements of prosperity remain unchanged. What is true of gamblers and stockjobbers is also true, to a certain extent, of losses by mercantile failures. A thousand merchants may fail, but all the wealth of the country remains undiminished. The London Times estimates the amount of liabilities of the firms in Great Britain that have suspended since October at £100,000,000, but assumes that, notwithstanding this enormous amount of unliquidated debt, comparatively nothing has been lost to the country.

This is a consolatory view to take of the subject and it is, no doubt, in the main a correct one. The actual losses which a community sustains are in the loss of crops, the destruction of property by fire and shipwreck, the cost of wars, the paralyzing of a special branch of trade or manufactures, and the demoralization of the people which leads to the diminution of their industrial and productive energies. These are the losses which a country suffers from, while but little injury is sustained in consequence of the suspensions or failures of those merchants and traders who borrow from Peter to pay Paul.

According to a circular issued from one of our mercantile agencies in this City, the amount o losses sustained by the defalcations of absconding and swindling debtors in the United States during the past year amounts to the appalling sum of $5,222,500; but large as this sum appears, we fear it does not adequately represent in figures the actual extent of our commercial rascalities, though we presume it is not meant to indicate the swindling losses of any of the great moneyed institutions of the country. It will give some idea, however, to the general mind, of the terrible cost to the people of the lack of honesty. Added to these swindling losses there is the sum of $20,000,000 owing by suspended firms which will pay nothing, while there are 3,839 concerns owing $197,080,500, which will not pay more than forty or fifty per cent. of their liabilities. The actual losses sustained by the failures of the year are estimated at only $143,780,000, which is hardly a third of the amount estimated by the London Times as the losses by failures in Great Britain. But, there having been no actual destruction of the elements of wealth, it is assumed that the country is just as rich now in all that makes a people prosperous as it was before the revulsion commenced.

The real losses which we have sustained have been by fire and shipwreck, and these have not been so large as in years past. Our total losses by shipwreck are estimated at $20,000,000, and our losses by fires in all parts of the United States have, been but little more than the same amount, less by at least five millions than they were last year from the same cause. The great fire of 1835, in this City, swept off in one night twenty millions of property, equal to all the conflagrations in all parts of the Union during the past year. So that, upon the whole, notwithstanding all the commercial disasters of the last year, the actual diminution of the wealth of the country has been less than in other years. The losses owing to the suspension of some of our manufacturing establishments, occasioned by the general derangement of business, have been much more serious than those arising from the failures or suspensions of mercantile firms. But even these losses will be abundantly made up by the increased activity of business hereafter.

KEEP COOL.—We understand that the ice companies are getting excited, and their expectations in regard to prices next Summer are running up to fever heat. They refuse to make any contracts for the next season, and are warming themselves with the thought of disposing of their commodity at unheard-of prices in July and August. They are perfectly jubilant at the sure prospect of their entire stock being forced into liquidation. The ice-houses, it is said, however, have quite two years' stock of the "thick-ribbed" remaining from the last year's crop, which was a remarkably good one, so that the proprietors of our great hotels, restaurants, and ice-creameries may remain perfectly cool notwithstanding the warm weather. There are icicles to come; but, even if they should not, and the thermometer should not rise to the freezing point this Winter, there will be ice enough for the next year, though we may have to pay more for it than we have been accustomed to do. Boston, too, instead of sending her usual car goes to Calcutta and Cuba, might assist us with a few lumps of Wenham Lake in case of need. We would advise every one, therefore, to keep entirely cool during this warm spell, and entertain no uncomfortable apprehensions as to ice next Summer.

The Murderers in the Tombs.

Two murderers, whose crimes have excited considerable interest, are now in the Tombs under sentence of death—MICHAEL CANCEMI for the murder of Policeman ANDERSON, and JAMES RODGERS for the murder of JOHN SWANSTON.

Officer ANDERSON was universally liked and respected; he was killed in the faithful performance of his duty; and, for these reasons, there has been more than an ordinary desire to bring his murderer to justice. CANCEMI'S case has obtained further notoriety from the fact that, at the first trial, the Jury were unable to agree upon a verdict. He was, accordingly, tried a second time and convicted; but, at the last hour, the sentence of the law has been stayed and the prisoner has received another chance for his life. We learn from Albany that the Court of Appeals has granted a new trial, upon the oath of CANCEMI'S counsel that additional and important testimony has been brought to light—testimony, it is urged, which will cast a serious doubt upon the justice of the prisoner's conviction.

If we look back at the evidence upon which CANCEMI was twice tried, it is difficult to imagine a more complete and unbroken chain of proof than that made out against him. Upon the morning of the 21st of July last a burglary was committed in the shoe store of Mr. SAMMIS, at the corner of Grand and Centre streets. The burglar was interrupted in his work by Mr. and Mrs. ANONI, who lived in the basement. He was armed, and, as he passed out of the store, he threatened first the woman and then her husband with his pistol. They were too much alarmed to intercept him, but the former cried out "Stop thief"—and this cry, heard by Policeman ANDERSON, brought him at once to the spot. Seeing a man emerge from the store, under such suspicious circumstances, the officer endeavored to arrest him, and while engaged in the performance of this duty he received the pistol wound that caused almost instantaneous death. The murderer immediately fled.

In this case the point turns altogether upon the identity of CANCEMI with the burglar of Mr. SAMMIS' store and the murderer of the police officer. It must be admitted that, so far as the evidence upon the trial went, there was not a link missing in the chain of testimony that established CANCEMI'S guilt. He was seen by witnesses walking towards the store on the morning of the 21st of July. He was seen going into the store, and he was seen coming out, and though no one actually witnessed the murder, yet many heard the report of the pistol-shot and saw CANCEMI running from the spot in the direction of Elm-street. The fugitive was closely followed, and was ultimately arrested at his own home, No. 120 Worth-street. His manner at the time, and particularly his exclamation of "Me no shoot," have been regarded as confirmation of guilt, and other circumstances, too numerous to detail, have tended to fasten upon him the burden of this crime CANCEMI'S pretence that, seeing a man shoot another on the morning in question, he ran away to avoid arrest on suspicion of being implicated, is a poor explanation of his hurried flight. It would imply a weakness and ignorance wholly at variance with CANCEMI'S character. He has been long enough in this country to know that it is not our custom to punish indiscriminately the innocent and the guilty. The fresh evidence brought to light is, however, important enough to warrant another investigation. It seems that two men, standing near Centre Market at the time of the murder, heard the report of the pistol, and, immediately afterwards, saw a man, who was not CANCEMI, running in the direction of the Bowery. This, if clearly established, might raise a doubt as to the prisoner's guilt, and that doubt, faint though it be, should be given in favor of mercy. The fact, moreover, that he was not seen to commit the deed and is convicted of it only by inference, is entitled to very great weight in the case.

The other murderer to whom we have alluded is JAMES RODGERS, a youth of seventeen. Over his case there does not hang the shadow of a doubt. He is a type of the New-York rowdy; and when, in the frenzy of intoxication, he drew his knife and plunged it into the heart of a man who had done him no wrong, and against whom he could not have borne any malice, he displayed that wanton brutality which seems to distinguish the ruffians that infest this City. On the night of the 17th of October last, RODGERS, in company with two other youths, encountered Mr. and Mrs. SWANSTON, whom they had never seen before, near the corner of Twenty-first-street and Tenth-avenue. The young men rudely pushed against the lady, and her husband remonstrated with them upon their conduct. This was the only provocation—if provocation it can be termed at all—that RODGERS received. He turned fiercely, drew his knife, and though held back for a moment by his companions, he succeeded in releasing himself from their grasp, and immediately assaulted SWANSTON. But one blow was delivered, and SWANSTON, with a cry of "Oh! I'm murdered," ran a few paces, fell, and instantly died. The assassin fled, but was completely identified as the wretched youth who is now condemned to lose his life in expiation of his offence. RODGERS was certainly drunk at the time: he probably was not aware of the crime he was committing, and simply obeyed his own degraded instincts. Even now, as he lies in the Tombs awaiting his doom, he has scarcely enough intellect to realize his position, or to contemplate his crimes in this world, or his hopes in the next. He has never received the first rudiments of education, and his ideas of religion are less intelligent than those of a Western savage would be. It is melancholy to reflect that this City contains numbers of youths like RODGERS. They have no moral perception of right or wrong, and it is only when they have advanced in years, and have learned by experience that crime is sooner or later punished, that they abandon their course of open violation of the law. RODGERS has been more unlucky than many others no worse than himself, for one of his earliest attempts at rowdyism has been an offence from the punishment of which there is no escape.

Operatic Enterprises.

Everything prospers in New-York but the Italian Opera. But that institution always has its blessedness in the future tense, like man in general. Every operatic manager, at the end of a season, is in the condition of Dogberry, a "fellow that hath had losses." It is more than thirty years since the first Italian Opera troupe, with the peerless GARCIA for its bright particular star, gave us New-Yorkers a taste of MOZART and ROSSINI, and from that time down to the present season, every new enterprise of the kind—and they have been altogether too numerous to mention—has resulted in a financial fiasco. There has never before been known such persistency of effort so uniformly crowned with disaster. There has not been even one instance of success to lure on other adventurers. Failure, failure, failure, has been the uniform and unvarying rule. Sisyphus, who has done duty as the type of unsuccessful efforts since the time of the heathen deities, might be permitted to rest for a while, and a New-York Italian Opera manager be allowed to take his place. All other speculators, even the dealers in Potosi lead mines, have their ups and downs, their runs of luck, but Opera managers always end in a loss.

Yet, notwithstanding this uniformity of failure, it is continually repeated that the Opera is an indispensable element in our civilization, that it is necessary for the enjoyment of the refined, the luxurious, the traveled, the dollared, in short, the upper classes, who, with all their wealth, and all their resources for intellectual pleasures, cannot possibly exist without the sensuous delights of the Opera. Music of the highest quality and the fascinations of the lyric stage, as we are told, are indispensable in a rich and luxurious metropolis like New-York. But, if the Opera is so essential to the wealthy classes, if with all their opportunities for recreation they cannot contrive to bear the burden of existence without this crowning work of human genius, why do they not pay a sufficient price for it to insure the enjoyment of it? Why is it that they pay so liberally for all their other enjoyments and gorgeous pleasures, while they are so niggardly and pinching in their so-called support of the only recreation which is said to be indispensable to them? Is it because they know that no sooner will one manager fail than another will immediately step into his shoes and be but too happy to sacrifice himself for the mere pleasure of furnishing the public with their dear, enchanting, and indispensable operatic enjoyments?

It is very certain that our wealthy and refined classes do not expect to obtain any of their other enjoyments without paying suitably for them. They purchase costly paintings, give orders to sculptors, furnish their houses magnificently, and some of them even exhibit their rare works of art for the benefit of the public, and yet they will not support the Opera. This conduct is quite as mysterious as it certainly is anomalous.

We must confess that we can find no other explanation of it than that their alleged love of the Opera is the sheerest simulation, and that in fact they do not care a copper about it. The theatres, circuses, minstrels, and all other public amusements of the City are liberally supported by the general public, and the classes for whose enjoyment they are designed. The Opera alone, which is supposed to be the special necessity of the refined and wealthy, is the only public amusement not sustained by the patronage of those for whom it is provided.

The present manager of the Opera, it is said, like all his predecessors, has lost money by the enterprise, and will terminate his season of fifty nights with a very serious deficiency in his treasury, unless his last three nights should prove miraculously successful. We are very sorry for it. The Opera, if not a positive necessity, has become a chief source of recreation to a large part of our population, and one of the attractions of the City; it is of special benefit to the dealers in fancy articles, to hotel keepers, milliners, mantua makers, livery stable men, and a good many other trades; but our citizens can hardly expect that an institution like the Opera, which involves so great an outlay of capital, and requires so much real ability to conduct it even to a disastrous termination, should be forever kept up unless it can be now and then made sufficiently remunerative to tempt capitalists and men of talent to engage in it. The race of ambitious and enterprising empresarios must, in the course of nature, after a while come to an end, and the opera will be no more in New-York, and Tara's halls will not be half so desolate as the Academy of Music in Fourteenth-street.

Northern Boundary of the Central Park.

Deeply interested in whatever tends to the advancement and adornment of this City, and deeming the Central Park one of the most important measures that has ever been undertaken to give it a Metropolitan character, and to render this City a delightful place of residence, I think you have done the public a great service in the wise suggestions made in the TIMES of the 7th instant relative to the Northern Boundary of the Park. I am glad to see that your views are approved by other papers of the City. It is so obvious to any person familiar with the ground that the Park should end where the high rocky land meets the Harlem Commons, that it is strange that any other boundary was ever thought of.

The Park now ends at One-hundred-and-sixth-street, an arbitrary line, having no reference whatever to the conformation of the land by which Nature has clearly indicated where the northern line of the Park should be. At One-hundred-and-sixth-street the land is higher, and still rises towards the north, so that buildings on the north side of One-hundred-and-sixth-street would entirely obstruct a view from this point of the Park that is not excelled by that from any other point within its limits. The high rocky bluff terminates abruptly at about One-hundred-and-tenth-street, the level of the Harlem Common being not less than 40 feet below the point at the Howder House. It is not necessary that any portion of these flats should be added to the Park so that its northerly line should run along One-hundred-and-tenth-street; indeed its beauty will be enhanced by a northerly line traced where the low lands meet the foot of the rocky hill. The land below One-hundred-and-sixth and One-hundred-and-tenth-streets is almost valueless for building purposes, and could doubtless be purchased at a much less rate than they could have been when the Park was laid out. Were it deemed necessary to purchase all lying between One-hundred-and-sixth and One-hundred-and-tenth streets and the Fifth and Sixth avenues there would be but about 64 acres including the lands of the various streets, and by following the line of the base of the high land the quantity would be diminished by at least one-third.

The prospect at this point of rocks is of unequaled beauty and variety. Below lie the long level of the Harlem Commons, in the distance the High Bridge, with its magnificent arches; the East River, Long Island, the southern part of Westchester, the Highlands and other features of great beauty and variety.

You are entitled to the thanks of the public for calling attention to this matter, and I trust that the Commissioners of the Park, of whose movements I am a careful observer, will take some measures to add to the Park the portion of high land to which you have alluded.

I may add, that I have not a foot of ground to be affected by the proposed change, and am in no way interested other than as a citizen.

Yours respectfully,

We are glad to find this matter, which we brought to the public notice in the TIMES of the 7th inst, attracting something of the attention which it deserves. Few persons are more conversant with the subject, or better qualified to give an opinion upon it, than the writer of the above communication, whose views upon it, we observe, are shared by the Tribune and the Evening Post.

The Central Park, it is evident, is to be by far the most attractive feature of New-York. No city in the world will possess a Park superior to it in many respects. It will effect a marked change in the habits of our people,—bringing out every pleasant day hundreds and thousands of carriages, and creating a kind of delightful recreation which thus far has no existence in this City. The roads for driving and riding are now monopolized by the "fast men" of the town—low in their tastes, rude and abusive in their manners, and making themselves and their trotting establishments a terror to all who have any regard for their personal safety or peace of mind. They have banished everything like fashionable driving and riding from the Island.

The Central Park, however, will restore it and give this showy and delightful recreation a splendid field. The Park will be crowded with citizens and with strangers, and nothing should be left undone to improve all the natural advantages which the ground affords. The only point which has been overlooked is the one specified: the exclusion from the Park of the sightly point of ground to which we have called attention.

We trust the Commissioners will examine this matter and take such steps as may be necessary to remedy this defect.

THE NEW SUPREME COURT JUDGE.—Hon. NATHAN CLIFFORD, confirmed on Tuesday as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Judge CURTIS, is a native of New-Hampshire and 53 years of age. He began the practice of the law in Maine, and has since made that State his place of residence. He represented a Maine District in the Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh Congresses; and in 1846 became United States Attorney-General under the Administration of Mr. POLK. While occupying that position he was delegated as one of the Commissioners to exchange ratifications of the Guadaloupe-Hidalgo Treaty with Mexico; the other Commissioner being Hon. A. H. SEVIER, of Arkansas. The ratifications having been exchanged, Mr. CLIFFORD was ordered to remain in Mexico as the Resident Minister from the United States. He was recalled in the following year, upon a change in the Administration, and was succeeded by Hon. ROBERT P. LETCHER. Since that time, Mr. CLIFFORD has taken no very prominent part in public affairs. He is a Pro-Slavery Democrat.

ANOTHER RESUMPTION.—The Rhode Island Banks resumed specie payments yesterday, but the Providence Journal says that nobody will know the difference. Probably not. But the most important resumptions that we now hear of, are the resumptions of work by the cotton and woolen mills in various parts of New-England. Almost every day we hear of some manufacturing establishment commencing operations again—not in all cases to the full extent of their working capacity—but sufficient to keep the machinery in order and to give employment to a good many laborers. The manufacturers are not rushing headlong into business again, but are prudently feeling their way along, and, as business revives in the Spring, as it must do, all the suspended mills will be set in motion again to supply the demand which the diminished stocks of goods must create.

Amusements.

CONCERT.—Miss WILLIAMS, the Welsh Nightingale, gives a musical entertainment to-night at the Mozart Hall, opposite Bond-street. Miss WILLIAMS is a ballad singer, and has studied under one of the best ballad composers of the age—Mr. SAMUEL LOVER. In Europe she enjoys a reputation for the entertainment which she offers to-night. In this country, owing to a variety of causes, she has failed to make the impression to which she is fairly entitled by her merits. We believe it is Miss WILLIAMS' intention to return to her home, and a principal object of this Concert is to furnish the necessary means to enable her to do so. Ballad singing is one of the most difficult branches of art, and one that appeals to the popular heart more than any other. A good ballad singer ought to be patronized, and we trust that on this occasion Miss WILLIAMS will have no reason to find fault with the liberality and appreciation of our public. The programme is excellent.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—To-morrow night (Friday) MOZART'S Opera of "Don Giovanni" will be produced with all the strength of the Company here. The chorus and orchestra will number upwards of two hundred performers. It will, unquestionably be, the musical event of the season. Sale of tickets commences to-day.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—After an engagement of unusual length and success, the "Wonderful RAVELS" make their last appearance to-night. It will be some time before we shall have an opportunity of seeing them again; and even this promise is clouded by a threat that the present is their last appearance before a New-York audience. Be this as it may, it is clearly an opportunity to display a genial feeling toward these admirable artists. We hope the house will be crowded.

SUGAR-GROWERS' CONVENTION.—A Convention of Northwestern Sugar-growers assembled at Springfield, Ill., on the 7th inst. The meetings were held in the State House and were largely attended. Judge CATON presided. Letters were received from cultivators of the Chinese cane in Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, and other States; all expressing satisfaction at the results of culture. One cultivator gives, as the result of his experiments, accounts of a yield of 1,231 pounds of brown sugar and 74 gallons of molasses from a single acre. Another states that the poorest ground produced the richest cane; and vice versa. A third dwells upon the value of the seed as an article of food; the average yield being 25 bushels per acre. It is said the seed produces a flour equal to the best Pennsylvania buckwheat, both in quality and quantity. The Convention debated the propriety of organizing a "Northern Sugar-cane Association," but finally decided it inexpedient to form a body distinct from the General State Agricultural Society. A Memorial Committee, appointed to report upon the best method of expressing the juice of the cane, reported in favor of a machine consisting of three smooth cast-iron rollers, placed vertically or horizontally; but declined to decide upon the relative virtues of steam or horse power. The Convention adjourned, after empowering the President to appoint a Committee of Nine to collect facts and statistics in relation to the growth of sugar. The meeting developed a number of interesting facts, and has given a powerful impulse to this new branch of enterprise.

☞ The City Hall bell was cracked yesterday. The five years for which it was warranted were out last week. The City Hall clock still tells 20 minutes after 3; no more no less.

☞ The following cases will be called in the Court of Appeals to day: Nos. 71, 72, 2, 12, 20, 26, 70, 32, 35, 39, 40, 41, 52, 69, 30, 50, 51, 58, 67, 23, 44, 49.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Maneuvering with the Minnesota and Kansas Bills—The Democrats of Wisconsin with Douglas—Meeting of the United States Agricultural Society, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Jan. 13.

The Senate Committee on Territories have postponed until Saturday any vote on reporting the Minnesota Constitution. Some members of the Committee avow the purpose to keep it back until the Kansas Constitution is ready, so as to let the Senate act on both simultaneously. This is now evidently the policy.

A private dispatch received to-day from Madison announces that the Democratic Caucus of the Wisconsin Legislature unanimously indored the Douglas policy relative to the Lecompton Constitution.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Jan. 13.

The National Agricultural Society commenced its sixth annual meeting at the Smithsonian Institute to-day. Twenty-four States and Territories were represented by numerous delegaates. The proceedings were interesting and important. President WILDER declined a reëlection.

The Senate to-day confirmed THOMAS W. FLEMING as Surveyor of Customs at Augusta, Georgia.

XXXVth CONGRESS.....First Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Jan. 13.

Mr. DOOLITTLE introduced a joint resolution directing the presentation of a medal to Commodore PAULDING.

The Senate debated the motion to reconsider the vote adopting the amendment to the joint resolution, extending and defining the power of the President in regard to the nomination of officers who are affected by the action of the Naval Retiring Board, which amendment prescribed that there shall be no such construction as will allow an increase of the number of officers on the active service list, as now authorized by law.

Messrs. HOUSTON, TOOMBS and others earnestly favored the reconsideration, contending that the effect of the proviso was to prevent justice being done to the officers who have been injuriously affected by the action of the Naval Retiring Board. Mr. TOOMBS spoke of these officers as being victims of the most perfidious treachery.

Mr. STUART argued that no necessity had been shown for increasing the active list. Although a great deal had been said about injustice, the specifications had not been mentioned.

Mr. DAVIS mentioned two cases of gallant officers who were struck down while on honorable service—the one in Puget's Sound and the other on the Coast of Africa.

Mr. HALE eulogized Commodore STEWART, and denounced the Retiring Board generally. When he closed his remarks there was a slight demonstration of applause in the galleries, which were densely crowded by officers of the Navy Yard and others.

After a long debate the amendment was rejected, and a joint resolution passed, with another amendment limiting the power of the President to nominate to six months after the passage of this act.

Mr. BROWN gave notice of his intention to offer an amendment to Mr. DOOLITTLE's joint resolution for a medal to Commodore PAULDING, to the effect that Congress has heard, with surprise, of the arrest of WALKER and others at Punta Arenas by PAULDING, and feeling satisfied that the said act was a violation of the territorial sovereignty of Nicaragua, and not sanctioned by any existing law, Congress disavows the act, and being officially satisfied that the said PAULDING acted without instructions from the President or the Secretary of the Navy, hereby expresses its condemnation of his conduct in this regard.

The Senate then adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Jan. 13.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union on the President's annual message.

Mr. CURTIS argued that from the earliest period of our national history till now, the Government has interposed in various ways to restrain our citizens from fitting out hostile expeditions against nations with which we are at peace. The operations of General WALKER afforded evidence of the necessity of the application of the neutrality laws. He adverted to the enormous expense of keeping the various routes across the Isthmus open. The routes were too long and distant, and the country too sickly to be to the advantage of the Government. To reach the Pacific a direct line should be taken across our own territory. It was wrong for the Government to go into fillibustering operations, but this has been its policy for years past, and it has winked too long at private fillibustering. An examination of the documents would show that Commodore PAULDING has, like a true and honest sailor, carried out his instructions. It was not his duty to expound the law.

Mr. CLAY said this was the first time he had the privilege to address the Legislative Assembly, and he was gratified in now rising to sustain what he believed to be law and order. They had seen the remarkable spectacle of an Administration apparently unsupported by its own friends, and on the reception of every Message from the President opportunities were taken to assail and pick at him. He acquiesced in every word that the President had written on the Central American question. It was necessary that instructions should be issued for intercepting WALKER's expedition, and to restrain our citizens from acts violative of the Neutrality laws. General WALKER was brought home, with the view of saving his neck, and for that he should be grateful. He broke not only international law, but statute law. He escaped from this country under false colors. Mr. CLAY maintained that it was not only in the power but that it was the duty of the President to send for General WALKER over the high seas and bring him back. He thought that Commodore PAULDING had committed a grave error, and that this remark by the President was sufficient censure on the conduct of that officer.

Mr. FOOTE said that there was but one feeling among all right-minded men, and that was satisfaction that WALKER had been arrested in his career of crime; and to that extent PAULDING had vindicated the honor and integrity of the country. He heartily concurred with the President in his views on this question. Although in the opposition, he would endeavor to sustain him as far as he could, even against the President's political friends. He entered his protest against the system of Americanization which was so earnestly advocated on all sides of the Hall. Before he could unite in it he must first understand by what right it was to be undertaken, and what are the precise objects and purposes. He denied that we have the right to Americanize Central America without an invitation; and that because that country be advantageous to us, we have the right to lay violent hands upon it. Before undertaking to Americanize our neighbors they should be informed of our theory of Government as set forth in the Declaration of Independence; and its practical working under the Constitution. In regard to human bondage he earnestly deprecated territorial aggrandizement. The acquisition of every foot of land, as experience had proved, had only weakened the country and engendered animosities before unknown.

Mr. LAMAR frankly acknowledged that the promotion of Southern interests was secondary only to the preservation of Southern honor. Although the South be in a minority, she, relying on the invincibility of truth and right, has been enabled to command the respect of her friends, and to defy the malice of her enemies. While justifying the Lecompton Constitutional Convention, and the result of their action, he said that Governor WALKER had violated his pledges, disgraced his trust, and in fleeing from Kansas had scattered firebrands of discord and dissension, and STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, who was for lugging in California over all law, was now endeavoring to outrage the rights of the Southern States, and subjecting Kansas to the rigors of the Inquisition, because there was but a slight prospect of its becoming a Slave State.

The Chairman reminded the gentleman that he was not in order to allude to Senators by their names.

Mr. LAMAR replied, that he did not allude to any Senator, but to a distinguished aspirant for the Presidency. [Laughter.]

Mr. MONTGOMERY contended that the true doctrine is, that when the Government is at peace with any nation, every citizen is at peace with it. If Government cannot invade a Territory citizens cannot. A treaty of peace is as broad as the country and embraces every individual in it. It would be a monstrous doctrine if a hundred or a thousand men could invade and attack a neighboring nation with which we are at peace. PAULDING did nothing less than his duty in arresting WALKER, and it was our duty, under the law of nations, to send him back for punishment by the offended State. The President had committed a mistake in being too mild and forbearing towards WALKER.

Mr. ZOLLICOFFER thought it was our best policy to let the Neutrality Laws stand. He did not believe that WALKER had violated them. He knew that WALKER was not a pirate and a robber, therefore such epithets had been unjustly applied to them. WALKER was a quiet, modest, self-poised man, of fine education, and understood the laws better than many who so grossly and coarsely denounced him. PAULDING's arrest of WALKER was a usurpation of power not warranted by the Constitution, but that he (Mr. ZOLLICOFFER) believed that it was in the spirit of his instructions.

The Committee then rose, and the House adjourned.

The Confirmation of Mr. Clifford—Minister to Madrid—Opposition to Collector Schell, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Jan. 12, 1858.

NATHAN CLIFFORD has been confirmed as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States! Comment is scarcely necessary. A weak man, without force of character enough to make personal or political foes, his nomination aroused a host of indignant protests against it, because of the unfitness of the nominee. No other charge was brought against him than this, and twenty-three Senators of the United States, including gentlemen of all parties, stand upon the record as having thus solemnly pledged their personal opinions against his fitness! Indeed he escaped rejection on that ground only by the absence of a Senator, whose duty to his country and his Constitution required his presence upon so important an occasion, and by the eccentricity of another, whose judgment is against his own vote, and whose constituents will feel insulted by that vote. How long can the Supreme Court be expected to maintain the least hold upon the respect and confidence of the country, in view of the precedent established in this last appointment to its bench?

What has become of that new Minister to Madrid? It cannot have escaped attention that the President, in his Message, went out of his way to suggest the importance of the Spanish Mission, and to indicate his purpose to send a new incumbent out at an early day, to succeed Mr. DODGE, and to press home some matters in discussion requiring to be disposed of. Since then various other missions have been attended to and filled—but the Madrid appointment, about which the President was in such special haste, remains untouched.

The secret of the delay is simply this. As I long ago advised you, it was Mr. BUCHANAN's fixed purpose to give that place to AUGUSTE BELMONT; but the premature announcement of the fact excited opposition in certain quarters too serious to be overlooked. As a consequence, the President has adopted the policy of "masterly inactivity" for awhile, to see whether affairs could be made to take such shape as to admit of his carrying out his original policy. In the meantime members of the Cabinet have been continually throwing out feelers to ascertain whether the nomination of Mr. BELMONT is too objectionable to admit of its approval by the Senate. I have serious doubts now whether it will ultimately be made—but am quite satisfied nevertheless that the President has not yet given it up altogether.

We have ominous rumors here of strong movements making by members of Congress, who are offended by Collector SCHELL's course, to prevent the transmission of his nomination to the Senate for confirmation. I do not think they have yet absolutely determined the plan of battle, but unless he can find means of allaying their hostility, it is quite evident that they will run him through a very dangerous gauntlet, if they do not actually secure his defeat. The charges they have to make against him are pretty severe, if sustained.

The bill introduced in the Senate to-day by Mr. FOOT, of Vermont, granting relief to certain officers and soldiers, proposes that every one who served two years during the War of 1812, or in any of the Indian Wars previous to the 18th of June, 1812, shall be awarded a pension equal to half his pay as such officer or soldier, but not to exceed in any case the pay of a Captain of Infantry, such pay to commence on the 4th of March next, and to continue during his natural life. It also proposes to give a proportionate pension to all who served not less than six months, and to extend the benefits of the pension to the widows of all the two years' men who are deceased. This liberal and just measure will undoubtedly be pressed with earnest energy by the Senator from Vermont, who will receive the earnest thanks of the old soldiers for his efforts in their behalf.

An elegant reception was given this evening at the mansion of Attorney-General BLACK, which was attended by hundreds of the élite of our fashionable and official circles.

ASSEMBLY....ALBANY, Wednesday, Jan. 13.

Mr. FULLERTON moved the adoption of the rules and orders of the last Assembly, and advocated his motion on the ground that it would relieve the Clerk and familiarize members with the rules.

Mr. LANNING opposed the motion, and said the will of the majority alone should govern the body. The Democrats had offered to relieve the Clerk by electing a temporary Chairman, but they had been defeated. Probably the House would desire to alter the rules of the last Assembly when the proper time came; therefore he moved to lay the resolution on the table. Carried.

On motion of Mr. MILLS, a vote was taken for Speaker with the following result:

Van Valkenburgh	60	Alvord	55
Law	7	D. Miller	1

On motion of Mr. KALES, a second vote was taken, with the same result, except an increase of one for Mr. LAW, by the arrival of Mr. REYNOLDS.

Mr. LANNING challenged the count, and Messrs. LANNING and C. BOUGHTON were appointed tellers, and made the count. Ayes, 61; Nays, 55.

The House then adjourned.

ACTING GOVERNOR DENVER'S MESSAGE TO THE LEGISLATURE, ETC.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, Jan. 13.

Governor DENVER's Message to the Kansas Legislature ascribes the bitter feeling and animosity existing in the Territory more to personal hostility than political considerations; refers to the harmonious action of the citizens of Nebraska as worthy of imitation by the people of Kansas; draws attention to the second section of the schedule of the Lecompton Constitution, advising the avoidance of legislation until the action of Congress is ascertained, for should Kansas be admitted under that Constitution all their acts will be nullified; recommends early attention to the collection of revenue and the building of a prison; alludes to the rumor of the existence of an organization similar to the Danites of Utah, and advises action in reference thereto. Other suggestions are also made relative to amending the Election laws and protecting the School lands.

The Democrat has just received advices from Kansas, stating that the Free-State Legislature met at Topeka on the 4th instant, and after receiving Governor ROBINSON's Message, adjourned to Lawrence.

General CALHOUN was at Western Missouri, where he had made a speech denouncing the entrance into the Territory of large bodies of men, but countenancing the propriety of single individuals rendering assistance to their friends.

The Westport correspondent of the Republican gives the following as the official vote in Shawnee and Oxford Precincts: Shawnee, 831; Oxford, 738. In both there was a slight Democratic majority. There was very little voting in Lawrence and Topeka. A letter from Fort Smith, Arkansas, brings intelligence of the death of Captain HAMBER, who had just returned from Utah.

The Santa Fe mail has arrived here. Governor RENCHER has been installed into office. About the usual number of Indian depredations are reported.

Inauguration of the Governor of Maryland.

ANNAPOLIS, Wednesday, Jan. 13.

Governor HICKS was inaugurated to-day at noon. His address opens with a reference to the evils of foreign immigration and the naturalization question, and quotes the farewell address of WASHINGTON against foreign influence. He says the people of Maryland have declared, in a way not to be misunderstood, their appreciation of these evils and their determination to remedy them. The right to vote is conferred by the Constitution alone; its limitations are prescribed in that organic law, and it is evident from the result of the late elections, that the people of the State think it requires further guard. He next touches upon religious interference, and alluding to the attempt to divide the public School Fund among sectarian schools. He condems the agitation of the Slavery question, and disunion sentiments, and says that while Maryland will hearken to no suggestion inimical to the slaveholding States, she will listen to no suggestion inimical to the Union with non-slaveholding States. He alludes to the recent election troubles, and disapproves of military interferences at the polls. He also alludes to the evil of carrying concealed deadly weapons, and to the law's delay in the prosecution of criminals.

The resolutions introduced in the Ohio Senate on Saturday by Mr. PHELPS, Democrat, were put through yesterday afternoon under the gag rule by a vote of 24 to 14.

Resolutions similarly instructing passed the House to day by 60 to 44.

The Wisconsin Legislature.

MADISON, Wis., Wednesday, Jan. 13.

The miserable controversy got up in reference to the Egyptian steamer, only calculated to injure the reputation of American engineers at home and abroad, has its origin in two causes, and is now kept alive by as many sets of men. One cause is found in the local jealousy excited in the minds of certain New-Yorkers, because Mr. STONE, an enterprising Bostonian, residing at Beyroot, in Syria, a dependency of Egypt, succeeded in obtaining a contract to build for the Viceroy of Egypt a steam yacht, which he very naturally determined to construct in his own native city, Boston; whereat certain liberal-minded New-Yorkers raised their voices loud in condemnation; declaring that it was a great error, as the before-named STONE should have built the ship in New-York, the only suitable place to construct such a ship; adding, in their just and virtuous indignation, that the Bostonians had a great deal of assurance to undertake such an enterprise—adding that the ship would be a total failure, &c. Boston, in her turn, becomes indignant, and hurls defiance at her liberal-minded antagonist, and promises to out-do all that New-York has ever done in this line, i. e., iron ship-building. Now, what are the real merits of the case? First, a firm of engineers are employed by the contractor, Mr. STONE, to design and draw suitable plans for a pair of marine engines. The plans are drawn and put in the hands of the Atlantic Foundry, Boston, who build the same after the drawings furnished them by the engineers who designed the engines. The engines and boilers so planned are completed, or nearly so, when it is discovered that the boilers will not do, as much difficulty will arise from the use of salt water and other causes. Owing to these causes, they are rejected, and the Montgomery boilers are adopted. The first boilers are of the horizontal tubular kind, now in use on the English steamer Persia, and the American steamer Vanderbilt. This unqualified rejection of the boilers built in Boston, and the adoption of the Montgomery boiler, produced a storm of jealous feeling, which showed itself in all kinds of ill-natured remarks on New-York work, and the new boilers, &c.; this rejection was considered a forerunner of the total failure of the whole work done, or to be done in Boston, by certain New-Yorkers. Now, all this was extremely unfair, as the materials and workmanship were of the most unexceptionable character, as we can vouch from close inspection of the boilers, &c. At the same time, common justice demands of us that we state fearlessly the facts as they really are. First, as regards the materials and workmanship used in this noble specimen of American iron steamship building, we would remark that as we have examined iron steamers in the course of construction in various parts of England and the United States, and have made ourselves somewhat acquainted with the principles involved in this, in our country, much-neglected branch of industry, having, then some knowledge of the matter, we venture to say, in the most unhesitating manner, that the vessel in dispute, La Voyageur de la Mer, is the finest specimen of an iron steamship ever built in this country, and will add that we do not believe that she has her equal afloat, as to materials and workmanship, as well as to general arrangement—all of which is mainly due to her much-abused contractor, Mr. STONE. As to the model, we have never seen it, unless in the vessel as she lies at the wharf; of the nature of the lines, then, we cannot say much with certainty; we can out state that the ship has the look of a well-modeled ship. On the first trip she broke a part of one of her engines; this, it is true, might happen to engines built anywhere. On the second trial it was found that the engines could not (to use the words of the contractor) sustain over 11 to 12 pounds of steam—although 37 pounds were maintained in the boilers—as the engines were so fragile as not to allow a greater pressure without danger of destroying the machinery; and that, with this steam, nine knots were had under steam alone, and with canvas combined, full twelve knots. Rumors were brought from Boston that the boilers foamed. On our questioning Mr. STONE as to this, he replied that they did not foam more than new boilers usually do; besides, he added that he had found an unusual amount of rubbish, causing much of the difficulty, which rubbish, however, he had removed. We were much gratified at learning this, as certain horizontal steam drums, designed to increase the steam room in the boilers, and insure other advantages, had been omitted by Mr. STONE to make room for some purpose. This we disapproved at the time, energetically, as calculated to cause the boilers to work water in a sea way, as well as promotion of foaming; but finding the mischief actually done, the drums having been dispensed with, and common steam pipes substituted in their place, we were compelled to submit with the best grace we could, consoling ourselves with the idea that if our fears were realized we could put in a steam chimney, and thus make the loss of the drums good. This, however, judging from what was told us by the contractor, will not be required.

As to the difficulty, it is soon told. The work, as far as we could judge, is fair: the builders should not be made responsible for the plan—they did not make it—the failure of which plan was due to the wrong arrangement of the valves and gear for working the same, the original plan of which bore a tolerably close resemblance to CORLISS & NIGHTINGALE's, of Providence, R. I., with a cross of the Atriatic's first valves. Had the valves and gear been arranged by these gentlemen, C. & N., it would have been a fortunate thing for all concerned in this noble ship, as their full gear in all its purity would have been used, thus securing for this ship's engines an expansion gear well adapted to quick-moving direct-acting screw engines. Mr. STONE was limited in his selection of a cut off, or expansion gear, as those so successfully used on our large steamers of the side-wheel kind are not adapted so far to the requirements of quick-moving, direct-acting screw engines; his endeavors were therefore limited to such arrangements as the engineers employed thought suited to the engines designed by them. We will conclude with the remark that our boilers have so far given entire satisfaction both afloat and ashore, as can be shown by referring to men of the highest standing in this country. These facts we are prepared to prove to the satisfaction of all persons interested.

Launching the Leviathan.

Mr. GLENNS' letter of the 6th inst. to you respecting the above may contain much correctness of idea, but not a very perfect information as to facts in some respects. I allude to his notion that "Honest John" in Britain is not up to screws, or to house-moving. Ten or twelve years ago I saw at Sunderland, in England, a stone light-house, 80 feet high, and computed to weigh 1,800 tons, moved rapidly, entire as it stood, a distance of 800 yards. This was on the occasion of the sea pier forming the harbor at that port being carried that distance farther out to sea (that is lengthened;) and while deliberating on the subject, and advertising for tenders for the removal and reërecting of the light-house at the new termination, a young Scotch architect named GIBSON offered to move it entire, and his offer being accepted, the building was tied and bolted in a case of upright timbers, and in less than a fortnight it occupied its new position at the extremity of the new pier.

It was moved on a level on a series of small rollers of cast iron, about six inches diameter, on a course of rails laid down, and was actually drawn and pushed to its destination by manual power. I saw it move at the rate of 15 feet in one hour, or thereabouts. House-moving and raising is not so frequent in England as in America, but this is owing to other reasons than want of screw knowledge, as Mr. GLENN would soon discover if he spent a month in London, more particularly if he should visit such establishments as MAUDSLAY's, CUBITT's, GRISSELL's, or any of the hundred and one large engineering or building establishments.

I don't enter on the other portion of Mr. G.'s letter, as it is not in my province or desire to do so and the more so as I fully concur with him that the ship can and will be afloat in two months whether with the screws of honest John or clever Jon than.

Yours, respectfully, J. R. WAGNER.

Murder.

On New-Year's night, in Troy, a quarrel occurred in a house near the Stone Bridge, between an old man, named JOHN TUFT and HENRY HAYES, his son-in-law, which resulted in the death of an old man. An ill feeling existed, growing out of an alleged interference in family affairs. This feeling has been so strong that HAYES had endeavored several times to keep the old man out of the house, and once or twice personal collisions had occurred between them. On New-Year's day the old man was at the house, and it appeared that the family agreed to forget their quarrels, and engage in a holiday carousal. At night, however, when both had become considerably intoxicated, HAYES renewed his quarrel with the old man, called him sundry names, and ordered him out of doors. TUFT refused to go, when HAYES commenced an assault upon him, and seizing an axe helve that was lying near, struck him with it upon the head, and about the body. He repeated the blows until the old man became senseless, when other members of the family interfered, and took the weapon away from him. TUFT died from the effects of the wounds then received, on the 4th.

who will appear for the first time in America as LEPORELLO.
CARD TO THE PUBLIC.
The Director announces that the present season will close with the customary performance of the greatest of all operas,
MOZART'S IMMORTAL DON GIOVANNI.
Of all operas managers owe most to this ever fresh and green chef d'œuvre for the replenishing of an usually exhausted treasury; yet it has always been produced with a carelessness and negligence, insulting in a high degree to the memory of its immortal composer, and affording to Bum-pean detractors of art in America an opportunity for strictures which, in this instance, are fully justifiable. The inauguration of the New-York Academy of Music has introduced a new era in this country as regards scenic effects, and the more culpable are the managers who until now, from inexcusable parsimony, have permitted "Don Giovanni" simply to "walk off" through a red-curtained door, and thus turn the terrific gran teur of the closing scene into one of supreme ridicule. Then it may justly be said that "Don Giovanni" has never yet been produced with a thorough ensemble. True, some of the greatest artists of the world have successively appeared in several of the leading characters; but the general effect has been marred, now by a tame Elvira, now by an unmusical Commendatore or a clumsy Masetto. The less said about the manner in which the majestic finale of the first act has been given the better.
It has been an object of much importance to the present Director that its management, at least, might not be disgraced by a similar inartistic proceeding, and he trusts that those who will honor Friday's performance with their presence, will observe a material change for the better. The last scene, inclusive of the descent of the libertine, is perhaps the most costly, the most brilliant ever exhibited, even at the Academy, and perhaps but little superior to the magnificently decorated ball room in the first act. The cast includes every artist of merit connected with the Academy, several of whom have consented to appear in subordinate parts, as may be seen from the following

METROPOLITAN POLICE.

OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE, NO. 413 BROOME-ST., CORNER OF ELM. —NEW-YORK, Jan. 6, 1858.—To the Inspectors or Captains of the Metropolitan Police for the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn:

I am directed by the Commissioners of Police to promulgate to the officers, who will communicate to the Patrolmen under their respective commands, the annexed Resolutions, which have been adopted by them, and to require of you a rigid enforcement of this order.

The Commissioners of Police having caused to be delivered to each officer and patrolman, a copy of the law constituting and governing the Metropolitan Police Department, together with the Rules and Regulations adopted by them, no excuse or apology, based upon ignorance of the law, can now be offered in justification or extenuation of any dereliction of duty.

The Commissioners will hold the officers of every rank to their rigorous observance, subjecting the violators to severe pecuniary penalties, or dismissal from office.

With the most anxious desire to elevate the character of the Police, so as to secure the confidence and respect of the community we represent, I cannot avoid calling the attention of the officers and patrolmen to the necessity of strict attention to their dress and general deportment. Negligence in dress, and a careless and unsoldierlike deportment, will bring dishonor on the force, and tend to destroy or greatly diminish that influence that your responsible position should entitle you.

It is too much the habit of policemen to loiter on the corner of the streets, and enter into familiar conversation with persons unconnected with their duties, instead of patrolling their beats, as required by the rules and regulations of the Department.

When on duty their time belongs to the public, from whom they receive an ample remuneration, and who have a right to exact from them exclusive devotion to their duty.

I am directed by the Commissioners of Police to require of the respective captains (except in cases where men are specially detailed by the Commissioners) that they preserve order at all places within their command, where patrolmen have hitherto been detailed, and that they make such disposition of the men under their command as will accomplish those objects.

The patrolmen detailed to special duty in the city of Brooklyn will continue to perform that duty until the further direction of the Board of Commissioners.

The following resolutions were passed by the Board on the 2d January, 1858:

Resolved, That the General Superintendent be directed to issue an order, to be read in the Station-houses, and published in the newspapers of New-York and Brooklyn, setting forth that as every member of the force has now a copy of the Rules and Regulations, this Board will hold officers of every rank to their rigorous observance, and will punish every violation of those rules by severe pecuniary penalties or by dismissal from the service, and the General Superintendent is directed in each order to allude to the careless deportment of many of the patrolmen while on duty, and to their negligence in dress, and to admonish them that they must constantly patrol their beats, and not stand in the streets, converse with any person except in the performance of duty.

Resolved, That all special details of Patrolmen, except to the places and for the purposes recommended in the report of the Committee on General Discipline, of this date, be abolished.

Resolved, That the Captains of the several Precincts shall be responsible for good order at all places therein where patrolmen have hitherto been detailed, and they are hereby authorized to make such arrangements in the disposition of the men under their command, for that purpose, as they may deem sufficient.

F. A. TALLMADGE, Superintendent of Police.

Miscellaneous.

ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC STEAMSHIP COMPANY.—Advices were received in this city by the Golden Gate, to the effect that MESSRS GARRISON & MORGAN, who have been so long endeavoring in New-York to open the Nicaragua Transit, have at length succeeded, and have organized a Company, under the title of the Atlantic and Pacific Steamship Company, with HENRY G. STEBBINS, Esq., as President, to run on that route. A steamer was to have left New-York on the 20th of December, but would be obtained in consequence of the unexpected landing of GEN. WALKER at Greytown. It is, however, confidently expected that a steamer will leave on the 5th of January—certainly on the 20th. Mr. GARRISON was to leave New-York for this city on the 5th of January, and will, therefore, arrive on the next steamer.—San Francisco Herald.

BLOWING UP OF THE STEAMER WASHINGTON.—We are indebted to Mr. NICHOLS, of NICHOLS & COTTER'S Express, for the following interesting detail: The small iron steamer Washington, plying between Fort Umpqua and Scottsburg, blew up on the 12th instant, scalding five persons, two of them it is feared mortally. The vessel is a perfect wreck, and the boiler was blown 30 feet over her stern into the river. The entire crew consisted of the captain and engineer, neither of whom, strange to say, were in the least degree injured. The passengers were Mr JOHNSON and son, DON PEDRO, PETER JOHNSON, and Mr. PETERS, of the firm of LODD & PETERS, Scottsburg. All of the above were more or less scalded—PETER JOHNSON and DON PEDRO, it is feared mortally so. The only physician within twenty miles of the place of accident, which was fortunately near Scottsburg, was Dr. VOLUM, the army surgeon at Fort Umpqua, and as the regular means of communication had been cut off by the accident to the Washington, a row-boat was sent that distance from Scottsburg, for the doctor, who had not returned when Mr. NICHOLS left. Mr. NICHOLS himself had a narrow escape, as he had landed from the Washington but a few moments before the accident occurred.—Ib.

COLLISION BETWEEN EDITORS.—An encounter took place between HENRY SHIPLEY, of the State Journal, and CHARLES A. SUMNER, of the Sentinel, on Third-street, near the Post Office, about noon yesterday, the result, doubtless, of the personalities lately mutually indulged in by the parties, with respect to each other, through the columns of their respective papers. It is related by an eye witness, that as SUMNER, having just left the store of KIRK & Co., was proceeding toward Fifth-street, SHIPLEY approached, and addressed him, at the same time striking him. The blow was given, it is alleged, before SUMNER, (who is short-sighted,) was aware of the identity of the person addressing him. After a short pugilistic display the parties were separated—SUMNER, as might be expected from the disparity of physical force, getting the worst of the encounter. His coat was badly torn, and he received a mark or two in the face, but manifested considerable game in the encounter. A second collision occurred about half an hour later, in front of the office of the State Journal. Some one presented himself at the door of the editorial room of that office, and informed SHIPLEY, who was within, that there was a gentleman below who wished to see him. SHIPLEY replied that that was his place of business, and if any one wished to see him he could come up. The man left, and, as we are informed, SUMNER soon presented himself at the door of the room and called SHIPLEY a "coward," invited him down upon the street, &c. SHIPLEY followed him down stairs, and being acted at the suggestion of Mr. SUMNER that he had in so much the advantage of him, handed his revolver to an acquaintance. There were, immediately thereafter, several collisions between them, SUMNER, on the conclusion of each calling SHIPLEY a coward, and thereby provoking another assault. Officer HASWELL (Acting Harbor Master) being attracted by the crowd that had assembled hastened to the spot and separated and arrested the parties. The examination of the case will probably come off before the Recorder this morning.—Sacramento Union.

San Francisco Markets.

PRODUCE MARKET REVIEW.

From the San Francisco Shipping Gazette, Dec. 20.

The prices ruling at the date of our last review for all kinds of grain have been firmly maintained since, and at the close we think Flour and Wheat a shade firmer. The business done in Breadstuffs, however beyond supplying the local requirements, has been very light, the country demand for that, as well as other goods, having been trifling. Feed Grains have been in active request, especially Barley, at stiff rates.

FLOUR—The quotations have been steady from lands of dealers, at $12 50 for Superfine Domestic, and $13@$14 for Extra do. Gallego, and Haxall jobbing at $15. For 300 bbls. former brand $14 cash reported to have been offered and declined.

WHEAT—The market has ruled steadily at 3¾c.@4¼c. for ordinary to choice and 5c. for choice Mexican seed.

BARLEY—The price has not deviated from $1 55 ₱ 100 lbs for prime samples and firm at that rate as we write. The average daily sales during the fortnight were fully 2,000 bags

OATS—Regular selling rates 2c.@2¼c. since last mail with fair demand; Seeds are selling at 2¾c.@2¾c.

BEANS—The supply of domestic-grown large and prime is full and low; choice White in 50-lb sacks, selling at 2¾c.@2¾c., and Bayos, at 3¼c. For Chili and Eastern no demand or sale whatever.

MONEY MARKET

Money has grown easier during the fortnight owing to a falling off in the demand, and within a few days loans upon merchandise security have been readily negotiable at 2 ₱ cent ₱ month. As we write more funds are offering than there are borrowers for.

We see it stated that both American and English Insurance Companies have advanced the rate of insurance upon treasure 25 ₱ cent, but as the principal drawers of bills here, insure under policies which have a stated time to run, there will probably be no advance in the rates of Exchange on the East until the expiration of existing policies. For bills mail Messrs. WELLS, FARGO & Co. draw on New-York at sight at the old rate of 3 ₱ cent., payable in coin; LAIDLAW & Co. at 3, payable in currency, and 3½ ₱ cent. in coin, and DAVIDSON at 3 and 3¼ ₱ cent. respectively.

The demand for bars for shipment by Monday's steamer is fully equal to the supply, and 880 fine, which sold yesterday and to-day at ¼ off, will probably be taken readily to-morrow at par. Mexican dollars are in supply just now, and nominal at 15 ₱ cent.; there is no demand for shipment to the East Indies or China.

An agreed case has been made up and submitted to the Supreme Court for testing the right of the people to legalize the payment of the State debt by vote as they did at the late election; a decision is looked for speedily, and it is not doubted will be affirmative.

Owing to a conflict going on in the Courts between the Commissioners of the City Funded Debt and the Board of Supervisors about some legal technicalities, the City Treasurer is not empowered to remit funds to New-York to provide for the coupons falling due, but will pay them on presentation at his office in this city. This is directly a violation of the terms upon which the loan was contracted, and will injure the credit of the city abroad.

The receipts of Gold Dust during the past fortnight have exhibited no material change when compared with those of November; they are not expected to show a large increase until towards the close of January. The quantity of rain which has fallen thus far this year is larger than during the corresponding period last year, and we may hope with confidence that before the rainy season is over we shall be blessed with an ample supply of water for both agricultural and mining purposes.

Stocks are wholly nominal, and there have been no transactions worth reporting made during the fortnight. Our list has been carefully revised and we give it below.

News From Oregon.

Advices from Oregon are to the 28th of November.

We do not find much of interest in our files. The following, from the Democratic Standard, exhibits the result of the constitutional election:

The result of the vote on the three propositions submitted to the people is clearly and unmistakably foreshadowed by the returns which have been received. The Constitution has been adopted by about 4,500 majority; Slavery excluded by nearly 5,000 majority, and free negroes excluded by nearly 5,000 majority.

News from the Sandwich Islands.

Our advices from Honolulu are to the 19th of November.

The Harriet and Jessie sailed on the 14th for New-Bedford with 118,417 gallons whale oil, 5,402 gallons sperm oil and 8,662 pounds bone.

There were in Honolulu harbor fifty-eight whale ships, twelve merchantmen and two men-of-war.

The clipper ship Mary L. Sutton was to sail in a few days from Lahaina for Boston, with full cargo of oil.

A sailor named MINOR HODODON, of Schoharie County, New-York, while attempting to make his escape from the whaleship Brooklyn, by swimming ashore, is supposed to have been killed by sharks.

Eleven whalers had arrived during the week from the Ochotsk.

A mutiny broke out among the men of the whaleship Alice Frazier, while on the waaling-ground last Summer, which finally resulted in the death of the ringleader, a fellow named HARRY SHEPPARD, who was shipped on board the vessel at Valparaiso in February last.

Medical.

OPERATION ON AN ELEPHANT.—During the late visit to Hull of WOMBWELL'S menagerie, the elephant Chubby underwent an operation which deserves a place amongst surgical records. For twelve or fifteen months previously, a tumor had been gathering on Chubby's off side thigh. Chubby sickened, lost his appetite, and pined away. Many ways were tried in vain to remove the tumor; until, as a last resource, application was made to a Hull veterinary surgeon, Mr. TOM B. HYDE, Jr. Mr. HYDE resolved to use the lancet. The operation lasted two hours, Chubby undergoing it with fortitude. The tumor when removed weighed five pounds, and one of the fangs had to be searched out with the knife, for a foot down the thigh. The operation proved eminently successful. Every fresh bulletin announced his improving health, till the latter end of November, when Mr. HYDE pronounced his patient thoroughly restored, and capable of returning to business. Chubby at once took the train to join his friends, Messrs. WOMBWELL & Co., and when we last heard of him his appetite and good looks were the theme of general admiration.—Eastern Counties Herald.

THE EXCISION OF A MAN'S TONGUE.—The following letter has been addressed, by Professor SYME, to the editor of the Times: "I regret to learn that an operation which I happened to perform in the Royal Infirmary of Edinburg has got into the newspapers; but, as it has unfortunately done so, the public should be correctly informed on the subject. Partial removal of the tongue, for the remedy of cancer, having been found worse than useless, it was thought that extirpation of the whole organ might afford effectual relief; upon this principle I proceeded. The patient suffered no bad consequences directly from the operation; but at the end of a week, when the external wound was quite healed, died suddenly from an internal disease, which might have been excited by any other irritation in a person of his constitution and habits."

THE FIRST STEAM-ENGINE IN THE UNITED STATES.—The Historical Society of Tennessee has received a communication from Mr. S. D. MCCULLOCH, of Lexington, Ky., giving particulars of the construction of a model of a steam-engine by the late EDWARD WEST, of that city. Mr. MCCULLOCH says:

"After the death of Mr. WEST, and the death of his servant, HENSON, in 1833, the contents of his shop were sold out, and the late Mr. BRENEN, of this place, became the purchaser of the engine, or all that was left of it, who gave it to me, as one of the neighbors and friends of Mr. WEST. I have that little engine now in possession, or all of its remains, which consist of a small oblong wooden frame, a cylinder and piston-rod, two valves for letting on and off steam, supply and escape pipes, and two springs, which apparently were intended as substitutes for the fly-wheel, to overcome the 'dead point.' The governor, if such a thing was known in those days, is not attached, nor are any other parts, to which the power was applied. There is no boiler, no crank, no way, in fact, visible by which he applied the power to the paddles, except, perhaps, a hole in the end of the piston-rod, and two levers acted on by spiral or semi-spiral springs.

I had intended to have sent it to the Smithsonian Institute, if I permitted it to leave Kentucky at all, and shall still deliberate prudently where I had better place it, so as to preserve it for all time to come. Your own good sense will agree with me, no doubt, in that. I regard the name of EDWARD WEST as national, and not local, and feel proud of his reputation as a Kentuckian and citizen of Lexington, as having been the first man, in the United States, to run a steamboat (model though it was) on the United States waters."

DEATH OF A CONDEMNED MURDERER IN PRISON.—The Boston Transcript says of the death of CATER, the murderer of Warden TENNEY, in prison, while awaiting execution, that his death was caused by hemorrhage of the lungs. CATER was only 23 years of age. He commenced his career of crime when quite young, and for several years past has been an inmate of some prison. He was formerly a roommate of the notorious ALBERT J. TIRRELL. His first offence was the robbery of a store in which he was employed, and while serving the sentence for the same in the House of correction, he made a murderous attack upon an officer, for which he was removed to the State Prison. On the 29th of December, 1856, he murdered Warden TENNEY; was convicted in the Supreme Court on the evening of the 4th of April last, and on the 11th of April was sentenced to be hung after the expiration of one year.

Murder of a Negro—A Mystery.

A few minutes after 9 o'clock, last evening, a negro suddenly fell in front of the Astor House, and, on examination, was found to be dead and covered with blood. It was at first supposed that he had just been stabbed, and that the murderer had fled, but the whole affair, even to the name of the deceased, is thus far involved in mystery. Officer UTT, of the Third Precinct, took hold of the deceased a moment after he fell, but he was unable to speak. On examination, blood was traced on the pavement around into Vesey street, opposite the gate at the rear entrance to the Astor House. The brakeman of the Sixth and Eighth avenue railroads, who adjusts the switches in Vesey-street, saw the deceased and another negro a moment previous coming quietly up Vesey-street and turn into Broadway.

Several persons saw the two after they had turned from Vesey-street. One person states that the second negro was supporting the deceased with one hand and in the other hand carried a banjo, and that after the deceased fell he darted off the sidewalk into the street and disappeared. The body was taken immediately to the Third Ward Station-house, where it still remains, awaiting an investigation by the Coroner. Shot was found in the right axilla, which is supposed to have been the fatal wound. No one thus far has identified the deceased. He is believed to be one of those negroes who have recently been traveling about to the different hotels, playing and singing. He was about thirty years of age, nearly six feet high, and had a light moustache and goatee. His dress was a black frock coat, no vest, dark spotted cassimere pants, with a reddish stripe, a cotton shirt, woolen under-shirt, and cloth cap.

The City Hall Clock.

Seeing an article in this morning's paper, in regard to the City Hall clock stopping, I would state that the key was taken without my consent or knowledge, by Mr. BENJ. WELSH, who claims to be appointed by Mr. DEVLIN, as Superintendent of Public Clocks. This evening I called on him, and demanded the key, which he refused to deliver to me, so the public must not blame me for the stopping of the clock, as I have done all in my power to give the public the time. Yours respectfully,

W. H. FAULKNER,
Supt. of Public Clocks, No. 459 Broadway.

AMERICAN BAPTIST MARINERS' SOCIETY.—The Baptist Churches of New-York have recently organized a Mariners' Society. The Board of Management consists of able business men—delegates from the Churches. The object is the evangelization of seamen. Rev. E. S. DAVIS has been appointed principal Missionary of the Society. An effort is to be made to provide more ample means for giving efficiency to the Mariners' Baptist Society now worshiping at the chapel No. 234 Cherry-street, of which Rev. IRA R STEWARD is pastor. An interesting revival is now in progress in this Church. The sympathy of the public is solicited for the enterprise.

Board of Governors.

The Board of Governors met on Tuesday, the President, C. GODFREY GUNTHER, Esq., in the Chair.

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

Governor TOWNSEND moved that the Board proceed to the election of a President for the ensuing year.

A recess of 15 minutes was moved and carried.

On reorganization a ballot was taken, Governor SMITH receiving six, Governor OLIVER two votes, and one being returned blank.

The election of Governor SMITH was subsequently declared unanimous.

The President elect, in returning thanks, urged the necessity of an economical management of the affairs of the Department.

THE VACANCY.

An attempt was then made to fill the vacancy in the Board occasioned by the resignation of DANIEL F. TIEMANN, Esq.

Col. Schwarzwaelder, Messrs. Schieffelin, Turnure, and McElroy, were among the candidates. A ballot was taken with the following result:

	BALLOTS.
	First.	Second.	Third.	Fourth.	Fifth.
Schwarzwaelder	4	4	5	5	4
McElroy	1	4	4	4	4
Schieffelin	2	1	0	0	0
Blank	0	0	1	0	1

As no choice was effected the Board took a recess. After about 40 minutes, there being no prospect of an arrangement, the matter was laid over until next meeting.

The weekly census shows 6,409 as the number remaining on the 10th instant, being an increase of 1,657 upon the list for the same date in the previous year.

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—To-night a pleasing entertainment will be given at this favorite Theatre, commencing with the new drama of the "Knight of the Silver Cross," and to be followed by the great pantomime of "Boreas" and drama of "Will Watch." On Monday next the distinguished comedian, Mr. F. S. The Silk Culture.

FLUSHING, Thursday, Jan. 7, 1858.

I have noticed an article, which originated with the Hartford Times, headed, "The First Silk Manufactured in the United States," referring to some which has been recently manufactured by Mr. F. KOLN, of that city.

It is quite amusing to witness so complete an ignoring of all the previous silk manufactories of our country. WILLIAM PRINCE, my father, died in the year 1842, being 76 years of age. At the age of 18, (in 1784,) he was so imbued with the true American system, afterwards so arduously sought to be enforced upon our country by that noblest impersonation of Americanism, HENRY CLAY, that he engaged ardently in the culture of the mulberry and the silkworm. His cocoonery yielded large quantities of cocoons, and he planned a filature which was highly successful. At that period there was a silk manufactory at Philadelphia, and there may have been others, but I distinctly remember my father's statement, that it was there alone that he could have fingered gloves and stockings woven, and as he was desirous of having these articles manufactured for his own use from his own silk, he sent his silk there for that purpose. I remember well to have seen the last remaining pair of gloves worn out at the finger ends, which were kept for many years by the family as a memento, and which I would now give $50 to repossess. Little is generally known of the ardent feelings of WILLIAM PRINCE in regard to our attainment of a real national independence. The culture of the vine, the tanner's sumach, the madder, licorice and other plants of great national importance, he continued through life to urge upon our country's adoption, as the means of rendering it independent of foreign supplies.

He always contended that our paying tribute by importations from other nations less favored by nature than our own, for such articles as our country could readily produce, was not only a tacit concession that Americans were deficient in intellect, industry and enterprise, but that it was an insult to that beneficent Creator who had stamped upon the favored regions of our country such preëminent advantages for its development.

WM. R. PRINCE.

What our Artists are Doing.

American artists, at home and abroad, of whom we are glad to see the number steadily increasing year by year, are unusually busy at this moment, and the spring exhibitions in New-York, Boston and Philadelphia, will contain abundant fruits of their industry. We learn from the Crayon for January, that Mr. CHURCH, who has taken possession of a new studio in the Tenth street building, has under way a landscape on a canvas some ten feet in length. In his room are a number of very pleasing studies, the result of his late trip to South America. Mr. HAYS, in the same building, has finished and in progress some fine gamepieces in his best manner. Mr. GIGNOUX is at work on an autumn view of Trenton Falls, for Mr. BELMONT'S collection. Mr. ELLIOTT is about completing a full length portrait of Mr. BACON, of St. Louis, a distinguished banker. The picture is destined for the Mercantile Library of that city, and is one of Mr. ELLIOTT'S happiest efforts.

Mr. ERNINGER is occupied with two cabinet pictures—one, "Lady Jane Grey," and the other an out-of-door scene, representing a young girl feeding a brood of chickens. He is also engaged upon a series of India-ink drawings, consisting of farm and drover scenes, which are fine compositions. These are executed in Mr. FHNINGER'S best vein. Mr. ROWSE has finished several fine crayon heads, among which are portraits of LONGFELLOW'S children, one of Miss CUSHMAN, and portraits of Messrs. J. R. LOWELL, T. E. CHURCH, and W. J. STILLMAN, all characterized by the same rare qualities which render Mr. ROWSE'S works so attractive. Mr. ROSSITER, who enjoys one of the best studios in town, has commenced his large picture of "The Merchants of the Country." Mr. G. H. HALL has lately completed an admirable fruit piece, which affords an opportunity for the display of fine drawing and brilliant color. He is also engaged upon cabinet-figure-pieces. Mrs. ANNA MARY FREEMAN, who has taken one of the studios in the Tenth-street building, has completed some miniatures of more than usual beauty. Mr. MIGNOT, now in the Tenth-street building—which we believe is called the "The Studio Building"—accompanied Mr. CHURCH to South America, and is now painting one of the peculiar mountain views of that "far countrie." The canvas is a large one, and the picture promises to be highly interesting. Mr. GIFFORD, lately returned from Europe, is located at Hudson. A number of his works, painted abroad, are at Mr. GRAY'S studio. One of these pictures, belonging to C. C. ALGER, Esq., "A View of Lake Nemi," will greatly advance Mr. GIFFORD'S reputation. Mr. LANG has on hand a picture called "The Dorcas Society." It is composed of industrious and beautiful young ladies, some of whom are working and chatting, and others, we think, coquetting a little with one or two young gentlemen in the background.
